Europe Gets News Mind Over Matter? Strangest Law Suit Why Germany Survives

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Courtesy, 1921.

Europe receives from President Harding a communication occasionally foretold in this column.

This country demands revision of the Versailles peace treaty, "a settlement of the reparations issue," which means a treaty based on common sense, not hatred.

The Knox resolution for separate peace with Germany will again be introduced in the Senate but not "pressed for action," if Europe does as President Harding suggests. If not, it will go through.

Also you learn, which is inevitable, that President Harding and this country want nothing to do with the existing "league of nations."

President Harding's notice to Europe that this country does not approve the Versailles peace treaty and that a fair settlement must be made is most important news, and will agitate Europe.

One proposition from Germany puts the allies in embarrassment—Germany owes billions to the allies—the allies owe more than ten billions to us. Germany suggests that she might pay to us as part or all of her indemnity to the allies the ten billions that the allies owe us. It is awkward to have your debtor offer to pay your creditor, when you didn't mean to pay the creditor.

Does mind control matter? Yes. Ask the doctors taking care of Mrs. John Koch in the New Jersey State Hospital for the Insane.

Mrs. Koch "saw" repeatedly the ghost of her husband. Of course, there was no ghost, and therefore she never saw any. But she THOUGHT she did, that was enough.

When a thing is strangest of its kind it is worth mentioning.

A maiden lady of Switzerland, named Krauss, grieved because she wasn't married. They consider that a disgrace in Europe.

Thus grieving the unfortunate spinster wanted to kill herself, but lacked physical courage. Two men agreed to drown her in Lake Geneva. She paid them 300 pounds for their trouble. They took the money, but didn't drown her. She sued them for not keeping their bargain, and most remarkable, both have been sent to prison.

Had they kept their bargain, taken the lady to the lake and drowned her as agreed, no one probably would have known it, and they would have got 100 pounds more. A difficult decision and strange law suit.

German Communists, admitting their insurrection a failure, have called off the revolution. Nothing in history equals the extraordinary stability of the German Republican government, with an humble harnessmaker at the head.

The thing is, however, not so difficult to understand when you realize that today the ablest men in Germany are called in to solve Germany's problems. They no longer select those most ingenious in flattering a Kaiser, nor do they select the "nobly born," who have proved a source of harm because of their in-breeding for centuries.

England has sorrows from which we are free. Her "alcoholic drink bill" for 1920 went up four hundred million dollars. Some prohibitionists will point out, good naturedly let us hope, that this increase in the whiskey bill would enable England to pay interest on the five billion she owes the United States and leave something over to amortize the principal.

Lord Bryce, former British Ambassador here and author of the best book on American government, protesting against conditions in Ireland, says "England's reputation is being tarnished." That puts it mildly. It must be embarrassing for Bryce, chosen to describe horrible things done by the Germans in Belgium, to see his own country permitting or encouraging wholesale murders in Ireland.

REPLIES TO ATTACK ON ATTORNEY WHIPPLE

Lieutenant-Governor's Attitude Questioned by Clergyman-Representative

Joining the Lomasney forces in the campaign to land Sherman L. Whipple as counsel of the Elevated stock scandal probe committee, Representative Roland D. Sawyer of Ware, the only clergyman member of the legislature, today accused Lieutenant-Governor Alvan T. Fuller of an attempt to cover up the "big fellows" in the alleged scandal.

Mr. Sawyer launched a tirade against the Lieutenant-Governor after Mr. Fuller had declared that Mr. Whipple's ownership of 500 Elevated shares of stock should debar him from posing the Elevated's affairs.

"Agile," "bungler" and "talking like a child" were some of the descriptives Sawyer buried at Fuller.

Following the retirement of Judge Cosgrove and others in a $10,000,000 of the probers, the committee met at the State House today to choose a successor. It was regarded as likely that a tender would be made to John W. Cummings of Fall River.

Judge Chase retired because he had been referred to publicly as a counsel in tort cases for the Elevated more than eleven years ago and because he represents the First National Bank, a defendant with Kidder, Peabody

Singing Crow Latest N. Y. Zoo Marvel

New York, April 5.—A singing crow is one of the latest marvels at the Bronx Zoo.

It not only sings beautifully; it is partly white, which in part helps more astonishing in an honest crow.

Its tones are deep, purple, velvety, passionate, like the lower register of Margaret Matzenauer's voice in Tristan and Isolde.

Crowds gather around the cage and listen to it in preference to the bulbul and the nightingale.

Like many another famous cantatrice, the singing crow comes from Central Europe.

RICH WIDOW HAS VANISHED IN NEW YORK

New York, April 5.—Mrs. Willias Birch Rankins, formerly Annette L. Norton, wealthy widow and socially prominent, and whose fortune is said to be in excess of $1,000,000, left her automobile for some unexplained purpose last Friday evening at the Fifty-ninth street and Second avenue approach to the Queensboro Bridge.

Since then she has not been seen by any of her family or friends. There is a suspicion that she may have met with foul play or is being held for ransom.

Mrs. Rankins, who had not been in the best of health and was subject to nervous attacks, eluded a nurse or companion, who usually accompanied her, evaded the chauffeur in a way drove her and vanished of her own will.

Her husband was the founder of the Niagara Falls Power Company and was known as Niagara Falls as the "father" of the town.

BOY SCOUT LEADER SENT TO INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL

Westboro, April 5.—Albert C. Nelson, junior in the Northboro High School and leader of the Northboro Boy Scouts was sentenced to the Industrial School by Judge Fowler in District Court, when he confessed to having broken into the homes of Caroline Caswell and Levi Prentice, March 16, and taking property valued at $7.

POLICE ATTACKED IN STRIKE RIOT

Fifty men, believed by the police to be striking building workers, attacked six men employed in renovating a building at No. 22 Chelsea street, East Boston, today, bombarded the workers with bricks, drove five away from the job and beat the one who remained before the police reserves put an end to the riot with their clubs. Later one of the attacking force threw a brick at Patrolman Ferris, who was on guard over the building, and when arrested attempted to draw a revolver.

WEYMOUTH WOMAN ASKS $100,000 HEART EASE

Heartbalm of $100,000 is sought by Mrs. Edith W. Lincoln of Weymouth in a suit filed today in Norfolk Superior Court at Dedham, against Laura S. Bonney of Brookline, charging her with alienating the affections of Mrs. Lincoln's husband, Alfred L. Lincoln.

FRANCE TO CARE FOR AMERICAN CEMETERIES

Washington, April 5.—France has informed the American Ambassador that the French foreign office has decided to "assume the expense of the purchase of property necessary for the setting in order of the American military cemeteries at Belleau wood and Romagne-Sous-Mont Faucon," the War Department was advised today.

U. S. STEEL DENIES RUMORED WAGE CUT

New York, April 5.—Emphatic denial was made at the offices of the United States Steel Corporation here of published stories that wage reductions of 20 per cent. and cuts in prices of iron and steel products were contemplated by the company. No policy on these questions has been adopted, it was declared.

PLATFORM SWEPT BY LOOSE GATE

Many Women Among Injured in Accident at Harvard Square Station

At least two persons were injured seriously, and many others suffered from contusions and abrasions, when a loose gate between two cars of an Elevated train pulling into the Harvard Square tube station raked the crowded platform today.

Women and men were swept from their feet, women fainted and became hysterical, and the cries that re-echoed throughout the station at the peak of the rush hour created something approaching a panic.

The injured whose names were reported, and who were taken home, were Miss Barry of No. 111 Medford street, Arlington, contusions of the right leg, arm and back, and A. S. Wiley, Magnolia street, Arlington, bruised and wrenched back.

Another woman whose name could not be learned sustained cuts to the right hand and arm, while many others required the services of physicians for nervous shocks and bruises.

According to Elevated officials, a Boston-bound train, consisting of four cars, left the yards at 5:40 and proceeded into the Harvard square station. The extension gate between the first and second cars became disconnected at one end and swung out to the left, at right angles to the car.

Five surface cars had just unloaded their throngs of suburbanites, who jammed the station platform, crowding forward in the daily rush for seats. The heavy gate, extending outward for nearly three feet, and moving at a considerable rate of speed, struck the first of the commuters at the lower end of the platform and cut a swath through the ranks of packed humanity.

The tumult of shrieks and cries was heard by the motorman of the train, who applied his emergency brakes and brought it to a stop. Someone telephoned Cambridge police headquarters, and an ambulance was rushed to the scene.

Patrolmen Malloy and McLoughlin hurried into the subway station, but found no one requiring hospital care. The more seriously injured went to their homes in automobiles. The train was delayed four minutes, when the gate was repaired and service was resumed.

GIRL ASKS $10,000 FOR ACID BURNS

Claims She Was Injured When Real Estate Man Tried to Kiss Her

Burned and badly disfigured by nitric acid, which she claims was overturned upon her during her struggles to avoid being kissed, pretty Miss Eleanor A. Dwyer, of No. 130 Calumet street, Roxbury, has brought suit for $10,000 damages against James H. Henderson, real estate salesman employed by the firm of Henderson & Ross, No. 1320 Beacon street.

According to the story told in her petition, Miss Dwyer was employed as a stenographer by the real estate firm at the Coolidge Corner office. Henderson, who is a cousin of the senior member of the firm, has been a salesman there since the war.

From the moment he entered the firm's employ, continues the girl's statement, he annoyed her with his attentions, which, she says, she repulsed. On January 24 last, she says, she was alone in the office with Henderson when he attempted to kiss her.

She battled with him, and declares that he lost his temper and struck and choked her. In their struggle, she adds in her petition, a bottle containing nitric acid, which was standing on a beam, was overturned, pouring the deadly stuff over a brown broadcloth cloak and beaver hat she was wearing. The acid burned through the clothing and inflicted hideously painful injuries upon her shoulders and back.

Her petition declares that she was incapacitated for months and that she was under a doctor's care for a long period.

Miss Dwyer and other members of her family declare startling disclosures will be made when the case comes to trial.

THREE INJURED BY BOMB IN CHICAGO

Chicago, April 5.—Three persons were injured and damage estimated at $2,000 resulted when a bomb exploded in the building occupied by Oscar Depriest, former negro alderman.

Love Lorn Girl Kills Herself With Gun

Manchester, N. H., April 5.—Ellen Paige, aged sixteen, was found dead in her home in Loudon, N. H., with a revolver beside her.

Letters found written by the girl lead to the belief that she was despondent because she believed her love for Robert Garick, son of the family with which she lived, was not returned. According to information given County Solicitor Herbert W. Rainey, the girl was driven from her home by her father and had gone to the Garick home to live.

The body was found by Robert Garick lying on a bed in a room in the upper part of the house.

ALL BUILDERS OF STATE TO UNITE

Lawrence, April 5.—What labor leaders here insist amounts to a virtual open declaration of war on labor unions by the Master Builders of the State, was announced today by Charles I. Alexander, secretary of the Master Builders' Association of Lawrence.

According to Mr. Alexander, the employers throughout the Commonwealth have called a special meeting for Thursday to be held in Worcester, at which a State-wide organization is to be formed, to be known as the Master Builders' Association of Massachusetts.

This organization, says Mr. Alexander, will have several objectives. The chief of these will be immediate settlement of any labor dispute without unnecessary delay, which may arise in any city throughout the State. The association also will seek to act in such emergencies as now confronts the building trades.

Incidentally, it is expected that the new association will be able to cope with the present strike.

Still another feature is the plan of R. J. Kennedy, which calls for the establishment by the builders of a school for training apprentices.

DAVIS TO TRY TO SETTLE TUG STRIKE

Washington, April 5.—Secretary of Labor Davis today announced that he would personally attempt mediation in the labor controversy on ocean-going tugs and towboats on the Atlantic coast. The Secretary announced that he would meet tomorrow with the tugboat owners and their employes in an attempt to solve the difficulties.

STRANDED SCHOONER EVOLUTION AD. NDONED

Nantucket, April 5.—After twice being stranded on Long Shoal, the Portuguese schooner Evolution, bound from New Bedford for Cape Verde Islands, was abandoned as a total loss. The crew was taken off by the coast guard cutter Acushnet and landed here.

DEFENDS WORK ON CLOSED BANKS

Bank Commissioner Joseph C. Allen and Attorney John E. Hannigan, liquidating agent for the Prudential Trust Company, today made their first official statements in explanation of the delay in straightening out the affairs of the Boston trust companies closed by the State seven months ago.

Both men denied there had been unnecessary delay. Commissioner Allen said extraordinary efforts were being made to straighten out the affairs of the Prudential, Hanover, Cosmopolitan and Fidelity Trust Companies.

Attorney Hannigan, for the Prudential, said that a partial payment of something less than 25 per cent. would, in all probability, be made to the 6,000 depositors some time next month. "If the depositors knew the truth they would be throwing flowers instead of brickbats," he added.

"Any statement that this department is not proceeding with due diligence is not based on facts," said Commissioner Allen. "Speed is desirable, but no less than proper and equitable adjustment. Every ounce of energy possessed by the largest State banking department staff in the history of the Commonwealth is being bent to this end."

Commissioner Allen pointed out that there are millions of dollars tied up with 100,000 depositors to be looked after. In this connection he denied the delay of some 19,000 creditors in filing their claims with him.

He admitted that there had been a "questionable transaction" in one of the four companies, consisting of a deal by which money in the savings department was used to take up doubtful loans in the commercial department.

Commissioner Allen avowed his intention of "getting every dollar possible for the benefit of depositors and other creditors."

Here is his statement:

"The liquidation of a bank," it said, "is necessarily an involved task which requires a reasonable time and prudence to accomplish. The interests of many people have to be remembered and considered at all times. A bank in good, sound condition can be liquidated with reasonable speed, but a bank whose affairs are badly involved necessarily requires a much longer time.

CANNOT LOAN DEPOSITORS.

"In one of the closed trust companies $250,000 of the depositors' money in the savings department was used to take up some questionable loans in the commercial department. I think it was done in violation of the law. I want that money turned back into the savings department for the benefit of those depositors, and we have asked the courts for authority to do so. These adjustments require court approval and take time."

Mr. Allen was asked at this point if depositors' money in the closed trust companies had been deposited by him with other banks, which were loaning it at big rates.

"Yes," he said. "I would not keep

SIMS AND EDWARDS TO BE DINNER GUESTS

Rear Admiral William S. Sims, Brigadier-General Clarence R. Edwards and Major Pschkoff, of the French Foreign Legion, will be the speakers Wednesday evening at the anniversary dinner of the Military Order of the World War in Ford Hall. Admiral Sims will be escorted to the Harvard Club by six naval and army officers. A military band of 100 pieces will furnish music at the dinner and the galleries will be reserved for ladies.

$150,000 FIRE FORCES SCORE TO FLEE

Manchester, N. H., Building is Damaged by Three-Alarm Spectacular Blaze

Manchester, N. H., April 5.—Fire, starting from an undiscovered cause in the Kennedy butter and cheese store on the ground floor of the Chase Building, in the heart of the business district, forced a dozen women and men to flee for their lives, and did damage estimated at $150,000.

Four firemen were injured, Captain Clarence Whitcomb and Hoseman Richard Johnson being blown some distance by a hot air explosion, and Hosemen Spring and Lemaire being overcome by smoke.

The fire occurred just as the theatres were letting out, and resulted in a vast crowd assembling to watch a most spectacular fire. The flames ate their way from the ground floor to the roof of the four-story brick structure, and the progress of the fire was marked by a number of rescues.

Policemen and firemen, ascending ladders hurriedly raised on either side of the burning structure, carried down a dozen women and men trapped in the scors of tenements into which the two upper floors were divided.

The heaviest loss was sustained by the John D. Hall Drug Company, on the ground floor. The flames, eating their way in here, gave the firemen a tough fight, because of chemical fumes.

Other occupants of the ground floor were the Guilmette Sisters, milliners, and the Family Shoe Store. The second floor was occupied by offices, and the two top floors by apartments.

Three alarms were sounded for the fire, which required a battle of some two hours to control.

GERARD AT IRISH RELIEF RALLY DENIES BETRAYING CASEMENT

Facing an audience of 3,500 men and women in the Boston Opera House at a meeting in the interests of the Irish Relief Fund for the suffering women and children in Ireland, James W. Gerard of New York, former ambassador to Germany, declared unequivocally that he never betrayed Sir Roger Casement into the hands of the British.

The occasion for the announcement came when he was presented by Senator David I. Walsh, who presided, as "an American who was trusted and set found wanting at his post of duty." Mr. Gerard had just stepped forward amid great applause and, leaning against the flag draped dais, was about to speak when a woman in the rear of the gallery facing the stage screeched the word "informer!"

The woman, who admitted she was from all parts of the hall. Mr. Gerard gazed at the woman, who kept waving her hands and yelling names at him. Her action interested him, and he struck her. Five policemen surrounded her, but she kept screeching imprecations at Mr. Gerard. Finally she was escorted from the theatre in the street.

"Now I'll tell you something about this Casement business," said Mr. Gerard. This announcement was greeted with frenzied applause. It was a minute or two before he could continue.

"Ever since I came back to this country some German sneaks and traitors have charged me with betraying Sir Roger. I have wanted an opportunity to deny that lie. That lie was started in Germany by an American called Sisserson. He called himself an American, but while an officer of the Pinkerton force in the State of New York, as I discovered, he was in the pay of Germany. Any thing that would mean death in any other country. Because I tried to take away his passport and refuse him, he is still in Germany and afraid to come back for fear of being arrested. He started the rumor absolutely without foundation."

URGES SPEEDY AID.

Mr. Gerard, showing signs of mental stress, told of his departure from Germany and of his arrival in France; of his conference with some French officers, of talk between them and himself on the absence of hatred among Americans.

"It was the absence of hatred in America that led President Harding, Vice-President Coolidge and Senator Walsh to lift their voices in behalf of the stricken women and children in Ireland," said Mr. Gerard.

SAW OUTSIDE THEATRE.

This gallery interruption was the only discordant note at the meeting. More than 5,000 persons were unable to get into the theatre and blocked Huntington avenue between Opera Place and Forsyth street.

Professor John A. O'Shea gave several selections on the organ. Next came singing of school girls, seated on the stage. Leo H. Leary, vice-chairman of the Suffolk County committee, called the gathering to order. He said that the quota of the committee in charge of the Irish Relief Fund was $100,000.

"It is a tremendous large sum," said Mr. Leary, "but were a smaller sum allotted it would belittle Boston."

Senator Walsh, presented as chairman, was given an ovation which lasted five minutes.

"Mr proof was needed to indicate the extent of the sympathy in this city for the cause which has brought us together this magnificent audience proves it," explained Senator Walsh. "We are assembled in behalf of a great humanitarian cause, a cause that is non-sectarian and non-political.

CARDINAL SENDS INDORSEMENT.

Senator Walsh praised James J. Phelan and the Suffolk County Committee for their work.

Major Edward F. Sampson, representing Governor Cox, said that the latter was unable to attend because of a previous engagement.

Rev. Florence J. Cohan of Wakefield expressed the regret of Cardinal O'Connell is not being able to be present.

"His Eminence has not yet returned from Baltimore, where he went to attend the funeral of Cardinal Gibbons," said Fr. Halloran. "Were he in this city he would surely be here to prove by his presence his interest in this movement. He stands unreservedly behind this campaign for relief in Ireland. He has the utmost confidence in the integrity of the committee and in their method of distributing the fund. He is heart and soul behind this movement for relief in Ireland. We should stand as argument to sway us to give to the limit in this cause."

JUDGE O'BRIEN REPORTS.

Judge Morgan J. O'Brien of New York:

The American Committee for Relief in Ireland has come into being for the sole and humanitarian purpose of alleviating the widespread suffering among the children and women of that country. Its primary object is to raise $10,240,000 which will go to the purchase of necessary supplies.

"As there is still food in Ireland, there will be no immediate necessity to spend any money on freight charges. If, however, the destruction of creameries, farmhouses and farm stocks continues, and if the land remains unfilled, as it is this spring, the problem of importing supplies may arise.

"At present it does not exist, so that every dollar raised will go to buying the food and clothing which the homeless babies of Ireland and their mothers sorely need.

CHILDREN ON RATIONS.

"From Dublin comes the report that thousands of school children are subsisting on scanty rations of bread and cocoa only. The Dublin corporation exhausted all its funds for relief months ago and is now largely dependent on wholly inadequate local private donations. According to the official estimate of the Dublin corporation, 5,800 children were fed daily during 1920. Owing to temporary stoppage of paymaster under Crown grants since August last less than 1,500 children are now being fed, and these entirely by local charity.

"The committee's report states that 'We are very many obviously undernourished children and some pitiful cases of rickets due to malnutrition; that due to lack of funds for medical inspection of schools little girls come carrying baby sisters and brothers whose faces are bleached with sores.

"The report shows further that on account of general trade depression nationally, upward of 158,000 men are unemployed."

POLICE GUARD NEW BUILDING WORKERS

Details Assigned to Bank Structures to Prevent Repetition of Strike Disorders

Details of police, including mounted officers, today surrounded buildings in course of construction in the heart of Boston's business district, to prevent a repetition of the strike disorders which resulted in attacks on non-union workers and the arrest of ten men, said to be striking builders.

The buildings which are being guarded include the new Shawmut National Bank addition; the new Federal Reserve Bank Building, nearing completion at Franklin and Congress streets, and the Workmen's Co-operative Bank Building on Pratts street.

The disorders, the first to occur since the opening of the building trades strike in Boston, started near the National Shawmut Bank structure when a group of alleged strikers set upon and beat a worker.

STRIKER HAD CLUB.

During this trouble Patrolman Quier attempted to arrest a striker who was said to possess a club. The latter's friends interfered and three were arrested with the arrival of other officers.

Another fight later took place in Congress square, where mounted officers quelled the disturbance and arrested two men. Two workers were removed to the hospital from Congress square, suffering the effects of attacks. They gave their names and addresses as Benjamin Delarusson, aged thirty-seven, of No. 16 Parmenter street, and James De Vinzo, aged twenty-two, No. 3 Noyes place, both North End.

Many workers were removed to their North End homes in autos, guarded by policemen. One truck was followed to Hanover street by strike sympathizers, who were finally dispersed by mounted police.

FIVE HELD FOR ATTACKS.

The following, arrested during the disorders, appeared in the City Court today charged with assault: Giuseppi Berado, aged forty-one, No. 10 Hanchman street; Michele Arbino, aged forty, No. 45 Maurice street, East Boston; Andrea Arstoni, aged thirty-four, No. 24 Webber avenue, North End; Rocco Armentino, aged thirty-one, Hanover street; Pasquale Giarguenzo, aged thirty-seven, No. 142 Cottage street, East Boston.

The following five men were arrested by patrolmen at the orders of Sergeant Flynn of Station 2, charged with obstructing foot passage:

Joseph Chreulis, thirty-five, of No. 63 Tileston street; Pario Liuzzis, forty-nine, of No. 265 North street; Christo Ckrbota, thirty-seven, of No. 56 North Margin street; Pietro Dinardi, thirty-four, of No. 60 Prince street, and Benny Vincenzo, twenty-eight, of No. 60 Prince street.

OIL COMPANY CUTS PAY 20 PER CENT.

Fall River, April 5.—The New England Oil Company announced a reduction of 20 per cent. in the wages of all men employed as mechanics on construction work at the plant. Up to now the men have been receiving $1 an hour. When the electricians were told of the reduction in their wages they left the plant without delay. This decision of the company is now in force, but will be taken up by the different unions during the next few days.

FOUND MEXICO GOOD FIELD FOR BAY STATE

Boston Men Optimistic Over Opportunities for Trade in That Republic

Filled with enthusiasm over the opportunities Mexico offers New England manufacturers for exchange of products, forty Massachusetts business men, who went to the republic, returned to Boston today after a month's absence.

Welton O. Wright, a representative of the Associated Industries, piloted the party of business men. The party returned by way of Washington, where they were to have been received by President Harding, but missed their appointment.

Though the Bay State men were away a month, they spent only about two weeks in Mexico, picking up information on the business situation on the way. They said they were much impressed with the way New Orleans is developing her port. Though it is not so good a port as Boston, gigantic efforts are being made to increase its business.

Members of the delegation said they were highly pleased with the reception given them by President Obregon. They felt that Obregon was earnest in establishing a stable government, better transportation and education in Mexico.

Mr. Wright said that from a scenic standpoint the Mexican trip was a great success. "We had fine weather," he said, "and visited many points of historic interest.

"In Mexico, as far as we could observe, the political situation was quiet and serene and business was good. I should say that from what we saw there are great opportunities in Mexico for Massachusetts manufacturers. It is a market for almost everything we make here."

Some orders were taken by the visitors, but not as many as they expected, because they said Mexicans do not do things on the jump like the Yankees and must have time to think over a business deal.

POISONED ACTRESS IS MRS. COURTLEIGH

New York, April 5.—Ethel Fleming, motion picture actress, who was taken to Bellevue after swallowing lysol, was identified as Mrs. William Courtleigh, Jr. In the hospital it was said she was out of danger and would go to her home soon. Miss Fleming, who is twenty-nine, attempted to take her life in a fit of despondency, it is believed by friends. They said that she formerly had been much in demand on the screen, but recently only minor roles had been given her. She drank the lysol when riding in a taxicab with Joseph King, a film actor. King had taken her to dinner and the theatre in an effort to cheer her up.

VERMONTERS TO HOLD INDOOR SUGAR PARTY

Vermonters who have migrated to Boston and formed the Vermont Association of Boston will hold their annual sugar party at Paul Revere Hall, Mechanics Building, next Saturday night. The smell of sugar will be in the air to conjure up recollections of early days spent in the Green Mountain State. Dancing will be a feature. The reception committee is headed by Justus E. Kinney, while Mrs. Harry Kent S. Currier is chairman of the refreshments committee, and Myron C. Cooke heads the dance committee.

GOES ON TRIAL FOR KILLING 11 NEGROES

Deputies Patrol Streets as Accused Georgian Faces Court. State Scores Point

By International News Service.

Covington, Ga., April 5.—Facing trial on the first of three charges of complicity in the murder of eleven negro farmhands he had employed, John Williams, central figure in Georgia's most sensational death case, arrived here early today from the jail at Atlanta.

Even if Williams should escape conviction in this county other indictments are expected to be returned against him in Jasper county.

One hundred veniremen were on hand when Judge Hutcheson mounted the bench. Special deputy sheriffs were sprinkled about the courtroom and patrolled the streets. There have been rumors that trouble might develop during the trial, but Judge Hutcheson and Governor Dorsey have scorned suggestions that state troops be mobilized here.

The State scored its first point when Judge Hutcheson overruled the defence's plea for a continuance. Counsel for the defence made a vigorous fight, declaring they should have time to examine Clyde Manning, the State's star witness, and then ten weeks to prepare the case. They also declared there was a faulty in the indictment, in that it charges Manning and Williams with having killed Delaney Pecrson at a time when his body had been found.

DEFENDERS IN DRIVE FOR 20,000 MEMBERS

The National Defenders, an organization whose purpose is "to stimulate patriotism toward our government, to promote honor in America, to bring peace between nations, and to suppress Bolshevikism," is conducting a drive for 20,000 new members in Boston. Only those who aided the United States during the recent war in some way are eligible to membership. The headquarters of the drive are in Room 215, No. 101 Tremont street.

WOOD AND COAL PRICES TUMBLE IN WESTFIELD

Westfield, April 5.—Wood and coal was reduced here today, all kinds of coal being reduced 50 cents a ton, except egg, which was reduced $1.50. Hard wood came down from $15 a cord to $13. Milk, moreover, costs now in Westfield 13 cents, a reduction of one cent, from 15.

LOCAL BREVITIES

Whitten Hall, in the Dorchester Women's Clubhouse, will be tonight the scene of a public performance of Miss Josephine K. Mcnary, violinist. She will give a short recital accompanied by her sister, Miss Irene Mcnary, of the Boston Americans.

Horace Greeley Lodge, K. of P., today received the rank of knight upon one candidate at Knights of Pythias hall.

A bill to permit unvaccinated children to attend public schools if their parents or guardians are opposed to vaccination was passed to be engrossed by the Senate by a vote of 29 to 15.

A ball is to be given by the J. Verdi A. and B. Club at Odd Fellows Hall, No. 615 Tremont street, Friday evening.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon for Dr. Alice Morton, eighty-four years old, from No. 35 Arlington street, Hyde Park.

Wounded and sick soldiers in the West Roxbury and Parker Hill hospitals are guests of a friend and benefactor, Mrs. Medea Hale of No. 1 Park street, Brighton. Her funeral was held today.

SISTER SENDS APPEAL TO MISSING BROTHER

HYMAN YALAM.

After three years in Yalam, of No. 29 University place, New York city, has heard from his son, Hyman, who disappeared from home. A short time ago Mr. Yalam received a note from his son postmarked Boston, but neglecting to give any address. Mr. Yalam has appealed to the American for aid in locating his son, and sends the following in the hope that Hyman will see it:

"Dear Brother Hyman—Please come home for you have nothing to fear, and everything will be forgiven and forgotten. If you can't come, at least write to us. Papa bought another store and you have a wonderful opportunity waiting you. Come home!

"Your heart-broken sister,
"PAULINE."

Mr. Yalam is of the opinion that his boy, Hyman, may have enlisted in the navy, and hopes that if any sailors know him they will let him hear of this letter.

4,000 ACRES BURNED IN RHODE ISLAND

Westerly, R. I., April 5.—Forest fires in seven towns in this county have burned over 4,000 acres of timber land in the past few days and destroyed several old buildings. Building losses are over $15,000, and the loss to standing timber, sprout land and cut wood is more than twice as large.

NEW FIELDS FOR DOLLAR SOUGHT

State Department Hopes to Thus Stabilize Exchange and Increase Trade

By International News Service.

Washington, April 5.—A new plan for stabilizing exchange and at the same time building up foreign trade has been worked out by State Department experts, and is about to be put into operation, it was learned today. A tentative outline of the plan, sent to American consular agents all over the world, is said to be meeting with an enthusiastic response.

The novelty of the new program consists in the fact that emphasis is laid upon buying and investment, rather than upon selling in foreign markets. Heretofore the chief duty of American consuls has been to find markets for American commodities.

The new instructions to consuls point out that there is such a thing as a too favorable balance of trade. They point out that trade should be a reciprocal affair. That there are certain commodities which the United States must purchase abroad because they are not grown at home, and others which probably could be secured abroad more reasonably even though they are produced to some extent in the United States.

The United States has become a creditor nation, as a result of the war, experts pointed out, and unless our foreign trade is reorganized in such a way as to bring the dollar back to something like normal we are in danger of losing the tremendous commercial advantage we have gained as a result of the war.

JOHN J. HARDIMAN DIES IN DORCHESTER

John J. Hardiman, eighty-five years old, of No. 87 Mayfield street, Dorchester, died at his home after a few days' illness. Mr. Hardiman was for fifty years connected with the Boston Elevated. He came to this country from Ireland in his boyhood. The funeral will be held at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning from St. Margaret's Church, Dorchester.

RECORD TOO BLACK TO BE DEFENDED

Providence, April 5.—George M. Leach, whose record of crimes was so black that his counsel could find no word for him other than to ask leniency on behalf of his mother, was sentenced to twenty-five years in jail for assault and robbery on Edgar M. Dexter, business man. Leach is twenty-three years old. He beat Dexter with an iron bar and took $17.

PRINCETON WOMAN, 33 YEARS OLD, MOTHER OF 10 PRETTY GIRLS

BUT GETS NO BOUNTY FROM U.S.

Father of Remarkable Family Wrote to Government; Rubs Eyes at Reply

Lo, the children are a heritage of Jehovah. As arrows in the hand of a mighty man, So are the children of youth.—From Psalms 127.

A family of ten girls is the proud boast of Mr. and Mrs. Roger A. Gleason in the town of Princeton, under the protection of Mount Wachusett.

They thought such a contribution to the U. S. A. should be recognized in the form of a bounty from the government, but no such fortune.

They wrote to the powers that be in Washington and from William Tyler Page, clerk of the United States House of Representatives, a letter was received, saying that the government gives no bounties for large families, not even for such pretty children as she exhibits. He highly commended them and referred them to the last three verses of 127th Psalms for satisfaction.

ALL TEN ARE GIRLS.

A few years ago there was much ado over "race suicide," and President Roosevelt during his administration on several occasions deplored such a tendency. The story got circulated that the government was offering bounties for large families, and letter Gleason wrote to see whether that was the case today.

That ten girls in succession should come to this couple is a record in itself, but the Gleasons have established others. Mrs. Gleason now weighing only 115 pounds, and her husband weighs close to [illegible] pounds.

The oldest child is thirteen and the youngest two years of age. Four of them came along, Ila, followed by twins, and then four more singly. Seven of them attend the Princeton grammar school—a walk of nearly two miles from their home.

Dorothy is thirteen and is quite as large as her mother, Lottie is twelve, Alice eleven, Nellie ten, Roby and Ruby eight, Goldie seven, Dorothy three, Bessie three and Deveeda, two years old.

Mrs. Gleason is thirty-three years old and was married when sixteen or seventeen years of age, upsetting the theory of some scientists that no girl years older is young enough to venture into matrimony. Mr. Gleason is five years older than his wife.

The Gleasons live on a farm. While Mr. Gleason is working at Austin's sawmill in Jeffersonville, about five miles from his home, his wife is employed at a department store in Worcester. They leave home early in the day and return in the evening. Mrs. Gleason's mother takes care of the children during their absence.

"It is almost as easy to raise ten girls as one," said the proud mother to a reporter for the Boston American.

WHAT CHILDREN NEED.

"Children need plenty of fresh air, sunshine and wholesome, plain food," she continued. "Some women seem to be as busy taking care of one child as though they had a regiment. My advice to them is not to worry about their child, give it an opportunity to develop and use plenty of common sense.

"The country is the ideal place for children. There they get plenty of pure air and sunshine and have a place to romp and play. Ours get plenty of fresh cow's milk."

When the father received the letter from Mr. Page he rubbed his eyes, scratched his head and said:

"I thank Mr. Page for his kind letter, but the 127th Psalm will not feed and clothe my young one like a check from Uncle Sam."

"I'm mighty grateful to Ancre Cheese," Mother sighs, "for taking the 'guest' out of 'question' of how I'm to tempt the appetites of my family these Spring days."

WOMEN STUDY CITY COUNCIL METHODS

Hear Lie Passed in Debate Which Closes With Cc. ... Tank Bill's Defeat

Women spectators studying city government methods were present at a meeting of the city council when the lie was passed.

Councillor Watson accused Councillor David J. Brickley of falsehood when the latter intimated that Watson was willing to swap a vote in favor of locating gasoline tanks in South Boston in return for a vote for him for president of the council.

Watson was trying to hurry a vote on the matter when Brickley wanted it postponed until the following meeting to give his colleague, Councillor Edward F. McLaughlin an opportunity to vote. The latter was absent.

"There is a certain member of this council who promised to vote for the tanks if he got a vote for president," said Brickley instinatingly.

"If that reference is to me, it is an absolute falsehood," said Watson with heat.

Brickley merely smiled and said, after the incident, that he had been approached by a third party and asked to vote for Watson for president in return for a vote in favor of the gasoline tanks.

The paying feature of the affair is that the vote against the tanks was unanimous.

WALTER M. LOWNEY EXPIRES AT HOTEL

Walter M. Lowney, the chocolate manufacturer, died suddenly at an Atlantic City hotel from heart disease. He had not been well for several months and went to the New Jersey resort with his wife on Friday last. The body is on its way to Boston today.

Mr. Lowney was sixty-five years old. The fame of his chocolates was world wide, due to his remarkable acumen and preservance and aptness with his father. He came to Boston in 1883 and opened a little chocolate bonbon making shop on South street.

FOUR TAKEN WITH LIQUOR AS AUTO BREAKS DOWN

Manchester, N. H., April 5.—Frederick Carr, of South Boston, Arthur Daniel of New York and J. A. Crowley and Jackson Palmer of Lowell, were arrested in Manchester, N. H., after a long chase, charged with transporting liquor. The men came through Vermont in an automobile bearing a Vermont registration. Officers were tipped off that the men had gone through and captured them after their auto had broken down. The men attempted to escape by taking to the woods. Six cases of Scotch whiskey, which the officers say was smuggled through from Canada, were seized.

BANDITS ROB MOVIE THEATRES OF $3,300

Detroit, Mich., April 5.—After binding and gagging three watchmen and two scrubwomen, four men robbed the safes of two moving picture theatres here. They secured $2,800 in the La Salle Theatre and $500 in the Washington Theatre.

Fake Divorce Lawyer 'Vamped' for Trade

White Plains, N. Y., April 5.—That Herbert F. Miller, the "fake divorce mill" lawyer, was a "he vampire" as well as a crook, is one of a number of startling disclosures that came out today in the investigation which is being conducted by the district attorney's office here.

An innocent associate of Miller's who has been giving assistance to the authorities said:

"Miller made love to most of his clients and to most of the women he met. One of the reasons his partner broke with him a year ago was the repeated instances where clients screamed in Miller's office.

"He had a wife and child in the Bronx, but he had another establishment in Greenwich Village, near Washington square."

It apears that the "Divorce Mill" lawyer, like Landrux, the famous modern French Bluebeard, used his amatory wiles as a business asset to gain the confidence of some of the women whom he afterward robbed.

"We have reason to believe that Miller has not been able to get out of the country," said Assistant District Attorney W. A. Ferris today, "and we are confident of putting him behind the bars."

BAKER SCORES LIGHTING AT POSTOFFICE

Tells Hays That Many Boston Postal Workers Are Losing Eyesight

Washington, April 5.—Increased facilities and improvements of working conditions for employes in the postoffices of the larger cities were discussed at a conference held by Postmaster General Hays with the heads of the largest postoffices in the East and Middle West.

The conference was called by the Postmaster general for the purpose of receiving suggestion as to methods of improving the postal service and particularly relieving the congestion of mail in the large cities.

The postmasters complained of overcrowded conditions in New York, Chicago, Boston and other cities and urged that a campaign be launched to educate the public to mail letters and parcels correctly and without delay.

BAKER REGISTERS KICK.

Postmaster-General Hays was greatly stirred by the statement of Postmaster Roland Baker of Boston, that the employes there "are losing their eyesight because of the poor lighting of the Boston postoffice" He said the government pays $125,000 annually in rents and that the whole building can be acquired for $1,250,000. He urged numerous improvements in the local service, such as better transportation facilities and closer co-operation.

Mr. Hays announced that he intends to create a welfare department in the postoffice department that would be charged with improving the working conditions of the employes in the larger postoffice buildings.

PARCEL POST EXTENSION.

Extension of the parcel post system to include parcel deliveries for merchants and department stores universally was discussed at length. The Postmaster General said that he favored the government taking over that business if it could be done without loss, but withheld any specific suggestions.

The postmasters at the conference blamed much of the poor postal service of the last three or four years upon their inability to hire or hold competent employes during the war period. A better class of employes is now coming into the postal service, due to lower wages and lack of employment elsewhere, they reported.

LITHGOW TO PROBE WESTFIELD ETHER JAGS

H. C. Lithgow, director of food and drug division of the State department of hygeine, is to investigate the drinking of ether by the school children of Westfield. The odor of ether was detected on the breath of several children attending the Green District School of that city.

This makes a total of four Westfield schools where pupils have been to ether parties. Evidence in regard to the parties was taken by the school principals of the Fourth Meadow School. Talks on the harmful effects of taking ether will be given in the field school children, according to Superintendent of Schools Chester D. Stiles.

WELLESLEY LEGION IS GIVEN A BIG HOME

A three-story dwelling house on Washington street, Wellesley, has been given to the post of the American Legion as headquarters. The donor is Isaac Sprague of Wellesley Hills, who purchased the building and will have it renovated. The sum of $850 appropriated at the town meeting for the rent of quarters for the Legion will be returned.

OUST ASSESSOR FROM OFFICE IN CHELSEA

Aldermen Remove Jacob Bailen From Board on Charge of Incompetency

Jacob Bailen, a member of the Chelsea Board of Assessors, was removed from his office by the Board of Aldermen by a vote of 5 to 4 on the motion of Alderman William A. Levy. Levy made a motion that the office held by Bailen be declared vacated on account of incompetency.

Samuel Abramovita, a former assessors, was elected by the same vote to fill the vacancy made by the deposition of Bailen. The latter's term has two years more to run.

The members voting in favor of removal were: James A. Hanlon, Louis Bettinger, Martin T. Ford, Richard Voke and Alderman Levy. Those opposed to the motion were: Joseph Tyrell, John Tucker, Samuel Talof and George Atkins.

WIND PREVENTS RECORD WARM DAY FOR BOSTON

Today started out to be the most torrid April 5 on record, but at 9 o'clock the wind shifted from the west to the east, and the mercury began to fall, dropping thirteen degrees, from 67 to 54, between 9 and 10 o'clock. The highest today, 70, at 2:40 o'clock, has been exceeded only four times on April 5 in previous years. Tomorrow's prospects are fair and somewhat colder weather with moderate variable winds. The lowest temperature at 8 o'clock today in New England was 34 at Greenville, Me., and the highest was 61 in Boston.

SALES TAX IS INDORSED BY CHAMBER

Abolition of Excess Profits Levy Favored, Referendum Vote Shows

Members of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, in a referendum vote, the results of which were announced today, endorsed the principle of a general sales tax, the abolition of the excess profits tax on corporations and the surtax on individuals. They also endorsed the idea of levying a sales tax, at a uniform rate, on all sales for the purpose of equitable distribution.

On all but the last question the vote in the affirmative was on an average more than twenty times as great as the negativt. Each question and the votes cast for it are as follows:

1—Are you in favor of: (a) The abolition of the excess profits tax on corporations? Yes, 2,232; no, 89. (b) The abolition of the present surtax on individuals? Yes, 2,065; no, 205.

2—Do you believe in the general principle of a sales tax in some form? Yes, 2,201; no, 120.

3—For the purpose of equitable distribution, do you believe that such a tax should be levied? (a) At a uniform rate on all sales, 1,235. (b) Or at different rates in different kinds of business, e. g., manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers, 850.

STEAL LIBERTY BONDS OF POSTOFFICE CLERK

Pittsfield, N. H., April 5.—Burglars broke into the postoffice here, and failing to find any valuable belonging to the government, made away with several hundred dollars' worth of Liberty Bonds and war savings stamps owned by clerks.

STILLMAN WILL APPEAL FINDING ON ALIMONY

"Confession" Letters in Divorce Suit May Be Made Public

New York, April 5.—Developments in the Stillman divorce scandal centre today on the alimony issue in the case. Following the finding yesterday of Supreme Court Justice Morschauer, the banker ordered his attorneys to appeal and the appeal may be taken to-day today in the Apellate Division in Brooklyn.

By official order of Justice Morschauer, Mrs. Fifi Potter Stillman is to receive within the next thirty days $15,000 in temporary alimony, and $47,500, counsel fees and expenses, making a total of $62,500, which Stillman will be called upon to pay within a month.

If the banker's attorneys so elect, the so-called "hysterical" and "confession" letters and the seven Beauvais missives may be made public, as Justice Morschauer made it plain that this step must be taken entirely upon the responsibility of Stillman and his lawyers.

Mrs. Florence H. Leeds, nerve-racked by the injection of her name into the divorce case, has written asking several relatives and friends to meet her in a Connecticut town to "tell her what to do."

It is therefore believed that she may now be within a short motor ride distance of New York.

The former Century girl, who is named as co-respondent because of her alleged intimacy with Stillman in the "Love Nest" at Miami, Fla., is said to have received a warning to stay away from New York. The developments today indicate that she may have decided to defy this warning.

It is known that she is considering taking legal steps to protect herself and the little son and determine the latter's rights in the case, and there are rumors that she is already in touch with counsel.

Anne Stillman Secluded in Western Hunting Lodge

Chicago, April 5.—Anne Stillman, nineteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Stillman, whose dramatic divorce suit is now pending, is in Duluth on the way to her home in Wisconsin, according to apparently authentic information reaching here today.

She is said to be at the hunting lodge of Harold F. McCormick, millionaire Chicagoan, on Island Lake, Wisconsin. Reports received here declare Miss Stillman is in order to conceal her identity, is posing as the maid of Miss Muriel McCormick, her friend and schoolmate.

Members of the McCormick family deny Miss Stillman is posing as the maid of Miss Muriel, but they are said to have declared that they know where Miss Stillman is and are aiding her to hide.

Reports received here from New York declare that the mother of Miss Stillman to Harold K. McCormick, Jr., will be announced as soon as the Stillman divorce suit and the Stillman family affairs are adjusted.

Island Lake, where they live five miles from Gordon, Wis., the nearest railroad point and is reached by a circuitous route from Chicago, it further is declared Miss Stillman, Miss McCormick and other members of the McCormick family reached there last week.

DAUGHTER OF CAPTAIN POLLOCK, U. S. N., TO WED

Newport, April 5.—Miss Beatrice Hale Pollock, daughter of Captain Edwin T. Pollock, U. S. N., and Mrs. Pollock, is engaged to Lieutenant-Commander Robert S. Chew, Jr., U. S. N., son of Mr. and Mrs. Chew of Washington, D. C. It was announced here. Captain Pollock commanded the U. S. S. George Washington during the war and during President Wilson's trip to Europe on board that craft. The wedding will take place in June.

MICHIGAN BONUS IS CARRIED BY 3 TO 1

Detroit, Mich., April 5.—The State bonus for ex-soldiers, providing $15 for every day's service in the army or in the great war, has carried by 3 to 1, returns show today. Under the plan no soldier can receive more than $250. In the street car fight the municipal purchase plan, providing for the purchase of the lines of the Detroit United Railway by the city, seems to have carried, while the service-at-cost ordinance, which had the support of the Detroit Union Railway, was defeated.

FISHING CHALLENGER LAUNCHED TONIGHT

Halifax, N. S., April 5.—At 7 o'clock this evening Shelburne's prospective challenger for the international trophy will be launched from the Smith shipyards and christened Canada. The sponsor has not as yet been named. Captain Joseph Conrad will sail her and the new craft will be made to the banks within three weeks.

WOMAN TAKES POISON IN MISTAKE FOR MEDICINE

Miss Mary Kerrigan, forty-one years old, of No. 42 East Eighth street, South Boston, is at the City Hospital in a critical condition as the result of having swallowed two bichloride of mercury tablets at her home. John P. Kerrigan, the woman's husband, told the police she took the poisonous tablets by mistake, thinking they were medicine for a cough trouble. The hospital physicians believe she will recover.

LODGE INVITES HARDING TO PILGRIM CELEBRATION

Washington, April 5.—President Harding was invited by Senator Lodge to attend the Pilgrim tercentenary exercises to be held in Massachusetts this summer.

Rigid Pose Lands Man in the Psychopathic

Suddenly becoming obsessed with the idea that he was an insulator or telegraph pole or something, Joseph R. Everett, of No. 61 Monument street, Charlestown, attracted a crowd of several hundred on Federal street today by standing rigid and immobile for twenty minutes on the first floor of the Library Bureau Building.

Everett stood with his hands closes to his sides in the position of a soldier at attention by the well-known infantry drill regulations.

A policeman took one look at the breathing statue and telephoned for the wagon. On its arrival Everett unbent from his classic pose long enough to remark fervently: "Thank God, I'm not insane."

When the patrol arrived, and the officers attempted to lead Everett gently thitherward, he protested vigorously. He was taken to the Court Square Station and later sent to the Psychopathic Hospital.

CLAIMS OTHERS KILLED PROVIDENCE GIRL

Providence, April 5.—Charging that two men who had never been even arrested shot and killed Rose V. McKenna and wounded William J. Deignan, her fiance, Attorney George R. Macleod has filed a brief here demanding a new trial of Rolf F. Adams, convicted of the murder and murderous assault. Attorney Macleod further sets forth that the case was not fairly tried and that the jury did not devote enough time to consideration of the evidence.

MOTHER CASTS NEW-BORN BABE OUT OF WINDOW

New York, April 5.—In less than an hour after giving birth to a baby boy, Mrs. Ethel Jones Hertzig, twenty-two years old, tossed the child out of the window of her room onto the roof of an adjoining shed because the little newcomer was "unwelcome" and she wanted to "avoid trouble." The baby, apparently uninjured, is at St. Catherine Hospital, where, in another room, the mother is detained on a charge of felonious assault.

ELECTION CONTESTANTS GET LEAVE TO WITHDRAW

"Leave to withdraw" was the decision of the legislative Committee on Elections on the petition of Matthew W. Bullock and Andrew B. Lallouette, defeated men who ran for the House on the Republican ticket in the thirteenth Suffolk district, that they be allowed to withdraw because of fraudulent campaign methods of the Democratic candidates, Frank J. Burke and Timothy J. Driscoll, who were declared elected.

SAYS GIRLS ARE VICTIMS OF TODAY'S SOCIAL ORDER

"Paltry girls are victims of the social order and circumstances more than anything else," said Dr. Kate Waller Barrett, president of the National Florence Crittenton League of Compassion, speaking before Wellesley College women at the home of Mrs. Waldo E. Pratt of Abbott road. The mothers were urged to take personal interest in unfortunate girls, who, Dr. Barrett said, are constantly increasing and overflowing maternity houses here.

REV. MR. WAGNER TO REMAIN AT NEWTON

Rev. James Elvin Wagner, pastor of the Newton Centre Methodist church, the people of the Trinity Methodist Church have been meeting in the New England Methodist conference at Springfield, will remain in Newton Centre. Bishop Hughes has yielded to the appeal of the Newton Centre Methodists that their pastor be allowed to remain with them. Mr. Wagner has been in Newton Centre three years.

TO BAR "BOOTS" ROGERS FROM STAGE CAREER

Philadelphia, April 5.—Edw "Boots" Rogers, acquitted last week on a charge of being an accessory of the notorious Peirce murder case, will be prevented from making a proposed theatrical appearance here if Mayor Hampton Moore has his way, according to a report. "Boots" was offered a theatrical contract of $700 weekly.

SPURNED LOVE LED TO ATTACK BY MUSICIAN

Forlani Has Acted Strangely, Say Friends, Since Rejection by Rich Widow

Two statements of Boston men today indicate that behind the strange attack made by Nicholas Forlani, former Symphony Hall clarinet player, upon policeman George L. W. Reid is a story of unrequited love which finally drove the young musician to madness.

The peculiar actions of Forlani, which led to his dismissal from the Boston Symphony Orchestra, his friends declare, must have come to a climax when the slight, ordinarily mild-mannered youth pulled the policeman who arrested him, following a supposed altercation with a woman near the home of Dr. Edna Flagg, No. 199 Commonwealth avenue.

ACTED PECULIAR.

David I. Goodman, owner of the apartment house, No. 116 Hemingway street, where Forlani lived, said today that the musician told him he was deeply in love with a young woman, whom he declared was an heiress, lived in Commonwealth avenue, but who had spurned his attentions and had asked him to leave her alone.

"Forlani came to my office here just a short time ago and said: 'Do you see that man out there,' pointing to the street, 'well, he is going to shoot me. He wants me out of the way.'

"I told him that he was practicing too much, for when he practiced much of late, his actions became to be peculiar."

MET RICH WOMAN.

A. Vannini, second clarinetist at the Symphony, who brought out Forlani, said:

"When Forlani became attached to the 11th Division during the war, I went to Camp Devens and asked that he be relieved from military duty because the nervous strain he had been under had, in my opinion, made him unfit temporarily for military duty. Forlani was sent to the Psychopathic Hospital for observation. I visited him there almost every day. He was later discharged from the army.

"He told me of having met a woman of considerable wealth while he was playing at Palm Springs, and said that he was greatly infatuated with her. I understood that he had been turned down in his advances."

HIGHER TAXES FOR RENT PROFITEERS

Portland, Me., April 5.—Tenants will be asked to tell the amount of rent they pay and if it is excessive the valuation of the landlord's property will be increased, so that the increase in taxes will accrue to the benefit of profiteering. Assistant city assessors will report rentals to the assessors and the valuation according to rent charged.

Have You Done This?

Have you put in a toll call—say for Mr. Brown of the Robinson Machine Company—and, when connection was established, been told that Mr. Brown was out?

And then, have you said: "Well, I'll talk with anyone," and found someone who proved a satisfactory alternate to attend to your business or receive your message?

For this "particular person call," however, you pay at least 20 per sent. more than you would if you had asked for "Robinson Machine Company—anyone," and, when connection was established, had talked with Mr. Brown, if he were there, or with a satisfactory alternate.

The moral is that if you had made this call on a station-to-station basis, that is, for the firm rather than for a particular person, the economy in handling it would have enabled us to save you at least 20 per cent. in toll charges.

Our gain will come, we believe, from your gratification at the speed and economy of the station-to-station service and from the greater use you will then make of it. One of our Commercial Managers will call and explain in detail if you ask us to send him.

ALLEN EXPLAINS DELAY IN PAYING BANK DEPOSITS

the depositors' money in the banks, where it would lie idle and earn nothing for benefit of the depositors. I deposited it in trust companies and national banks at the best rate of interest available, and with absolutely no risk to the depositors. Under the law, I could not loan it to the depositors. I am not permitted to go into the banking business. If I were permitted to loan out that money, the very making of the loans would delay the final liquidation of the banks themselves. When liquidation is at hand, that money and the interest it has earned for the depositors can be obtained without delay."

Returning to the subject of delays which the liquidation of the closed banks involve, Commissioner Allen said:

"It isn't possible under the law, nor is it good judgment, for the bank commissioner to act arbitrarily or with undue haste to convert all his assets into cash at once. As an illustration, some of these funds were placed on real estate mortgages. People borrowed that money with which to acquire homes. They were given a reasonable time in which to fulfill their obligations. It would be neither reasonable nor just to take away those homes from the people.

"Money is tight, and they should be given an adequate time in which to transfer their loans elsewhere. A foreclosure might require them to sell their homes on a forced market, when they would be placed at the disadvantageous terms of such a sale, and the depositors in the banks might receive not more than fifty cents on every dollar of their money loaned for this purpose.

MUST CONSIDER BORROWERS.

"Take as an illustration the business man who has borrowed from the banks. The present condition of his business might be unprofitable. To foreclose him might be to destroy his business, which provides employment, and added taxable values for the people, who are the state, as well as rendering the amount of dividend which the depositors will ultimately receive.

"I have felt it to be my duty to be reasonable in my requirements of borrowers. If a borrower made substantial and regular payments on his debt I have deemed it to be unwise to call on him for immediate payment. Nevertheless, we have been collecting on the loans as fast as we can. If they have been slow, it is because of the difficulties involved in forcing payments."

ALL TREATED ALIKE.

Mr. Allen was told that some of the depositors would argue that their businesses were being hurt also.

"That is true," he said. "It is unfortunate that they chose the character of bank in which to do business that it was deemed necessary by me to close. However, I cannot sacrifice the rights of all the other depositors. I am, as I have said, forbidden by law to make loans to a depositor. It is also my duty to do all within my power to see to it that no depositor who has only $1 in a closed bank receives as much in proportion as the person who has $10,000.

"The law itself sets up conditions which make for what seems to be delay. Every depositor had to be given notice and ample time to prove his claim. The law provided that the claims had to be advertised three months. I urged and urged to depositors and other creditors to file their proofs of claim.

100,000 CASES TO HANDLE.

"I sent every one of the more than 100,000 a notice, letter and a postcard. The newspapers assisted me. But when the ninety days had elapsed, more than 15,000 depositors had failed to file their claims. In order that justice would be done to every depositor, I extended the time to May 1.

"The claim of every one of the 100,000 depositors has to be looked up and verified. In many instances their passbooks or claims did not coincide with the books of the bank. We had to be certain also that a person who had a deposit of $1,000, for example, in the savings department was not a debtor of the bank for a larger amount, or for any amount, in the commercial department.

NEEDS COURT SANCTION.

"In order to compound a bad or doubtful debt, it is necessary to obtain a decree from the Supreme Court. By that I mean that it is necessary to obtain the approval of the court for the bank commissioner to settle any debt in any one of the closed banks for less than one hundred cents on the dollar."

Mr. Allen declined to estimate the number of loans in the trust companies. "The number is very large," he said, "but I do not care to risk an overestimate."

He said it will be necessary also to obtain court approval for the payment of a dividend to the depositors.

DENIES UNDILIGENCE.

"All the claims ought to be in and proved," he said, "before a dividend is declared. This must be done for the protection of every depositor, in order that every depositor shall get his full share."

"Any statement that this department is not proceeding with due diligence is not based on facts. There are a great many millions of dollars tied up. There is a large number of people whose money is involved and to whom a proper adjustment means much. My whole department is bending every energy. The primary desire is to bring about a just settlement for every depositor."

Prudential Bank Will Pay Dividend in May

A partial payment of less than $5 per cent. will probably be made some time next month to the 4,000 depositors of the Prudential Trust Company, closed seven months ago by Bank Commissioner Joseph C. Allen, according to a statement to the Boston American by Attorney John E. Hannigan, liquidating agent.

In reply to criticism from members of a depositors' protective committee, who stated that they had no confidence in the liquidating agent and that he was arbitrary and tried to bulldoze them, Attorney Hannigan said that he was doing his utmost for the depositors.

"If they knew all that I have been doing for them," he said, "they would be throwing flowers at me instead of bricks. This is the first time during the thirty years I have been practicing in court that I was ever accused of trying to bulldoze anyone.

SOME QUESTIONS FOR COURT.

"I voluntarily met the members of the Prudential depositors' protective committee and for an hour and a half answered questions as fairly as I could. The questions were put to me in a sneering manner, but I answered them as best I could.

"Certain questions were put to me which I could not answer definitely, and I said so. There are many legal questions involved in the liquidation, questions for the court to consider.

"Therefore it is impossible to answer some questions in the manner that depositors would like to have them answered. The liquidation is an intricate matter as the records of the company were in bad shape.

"I realize that the depositors want to get their money as quickly as possible. I know that many of them need their money. But in matters of this sort we are bound by the laws. I did not make the laws. I have heard many pathetic stories from depositors and have gone home sick on several occasions as a result. I have dug down into my own pocket to help some of them.

AIDED DEPOSITORS AT XMAS.

"I don't like to brag, but it was I who was largely responsible for the arrangement whereby depositors in the savings department of the several closed trust companies were able to borrow 25 per cent. of their money at Christmas by payment of six per cent. interest to the banks in which the bank commissioner had to be done when the deposits were deposited the funds for safe keeping.

"I know that there has been criticism of this plan but something had clamoring to borrow some of their funds. They were paying 5 per cent. a month for loans from loan agencies, putting up their bank books as collateral. At my suggestion the banks in which the money from the closed trust companies had been deposited opened an office and loaned 25 per cent. to depositors who desired it, and the 6 per cent. they charged will not any more than pay for the expense they were put to.

900 CLAIMS STILL UNFILED.

"So far as putting the money from the closed trust companies into certain large banks at 2 and 2½ per cent. interest is concerned, the Bank Commissioner did that, as required by law, and obtained the going rate of interest. He had to put the money in safe banks as required by law. He could not speculate with those funds. He merely has charge of them until ordered to dispose of them by the court. And I am only a receiver.

"Because at least 2,000 persons had not proved their claims at the end of three months—the time allowed by law, the bank commissioner asked for an extension of the time until May 1. Even now there are 800 outstanding claims representing $15,000 in deposits. Soon after the first of May a petition will be filed in the Superior Court for the purpose of payment of a dividend.

"Since becoming the liquidation agent I have collected over $600,000 marked in the beginning as hopeless. I have met nearly every depositor and have been willing at all times to help every one of them.

IRREGULARITIES TAKE TIME.

"On March 28 there was on hand in the commercial department was $428,279, and the claims amounted to rising $500,000. The cash on hand in the savings department amounted to $256,732 and the claims $871,238.

"I had been at work on the liquidation but a short time when I found certain irregularities in the accounts. I found that money had been illegally borrowed from the savings department and put into the commercial department with 'I. O. U's' left in the savings department to represent cash. I engaged a certified public accountant who discovered that these transactions totaled $782,000.

"These things have been called to the attention of the Supreme Court [illegible] by the bank commissioner and we expect to file briefs [illegible] a decision of the court by June determining whether the $782,000 will be transferred from the commercial to the savings department.

DOUBTS 25 P. C. DIVIDEND.

"If it is transferred the savings department will be nearly solvent with a corresponding loss for the commercial depositors. It is for the court, however, to say what shall be done.

"Under present conditions I can't see how a final dividend of twenty-five per cent. can be paid. I won't attempt to say how much will be paid. That is for the court to say upon the facts presented.

"Many things must be taken into consideration in determining what the payments will be. For instance, there are two accounts in which assigned forgeries figure. They involve $27,000, one is an account of $13,000, the other $14,000. What disposition the court will make of these matters I do not know.

"Then there is the matter of the liability of the stockholders and how much we can get from them. I am doing my best to get as much for the depositors as I can. There is certain information that I can not give out because it would hurt their interests."

Mr. Hannigan said that as liquidating agent he is not called upon to recommend whether or not criminal action should be taken against anyone. He would not say whether his investigations into the affairs of the Prudential indicated violations of criminal law.

Court Asked to Bar Transfer of Deposits

Initial court action to secure money now deposited in various banks recently closed by Bank Commissioner Allen, has been taken by Edward Judkin of East Providence, whose bill to restrain Mr. Allen from transferring $12,357 from the commercial to the savings department of the Prudential Trust Company was heard by Judge George W. Anderson of the federal court.

The $12,357 is the remainder of a $14,000 deposit which Mr. Judkins made in the bank a few weeks prior to its closing. It is claimed by Mr. Judkins that this money was on deposit at the Prudential Trust Company on September 10, the day the bank was closed.

Attorney John E. Hannigan represented Commissioner Allen and the Prudential Trust Company at the hearing while Attorney Joseph B. Jacobs was counsel for Judkins.

Judge Anderson, after listening to counsel, including Daniel T. O'Connell, representing certain depositors in the commercial department of the Prudential Trust Company, permitted a stipulation to be entered into by Mr. Hannigan that no action would be taken toward imperiling Mr. Judkins' interests pending the hearing of the case.

The final hearing in the case will determine first of all whether or not the Federal court will take jurisdiction.

Sawyer said in his statement:

"The most interesting development of the situation appears to be the alacrity with which our agile Lieutenant-Governor changes front.

"I am wondering if the Lieutenant-Governor simply wanted an investigation that might go no further than beamish a few Senators on the glory of which he might ride forth as a candidate for Governor, or whether he is seeking to engineer his personal counsel into a position on the committee, or whether he finds his fingers burned or in danger of being burned if the investigation reaches the big fellows.

"Anyway it appears to me that his present position is a most enviable one. He starts an investigation, casts suspicion on his own political party, his former friends, and then seeks to discredit the only man who took him in good faith to the extent of coming forward to aid in his efforts.

"It is evident to me that Mr. Fuller's attack on Mr. Whipple and Mr. Lomasney reveals that while Mr. Whipple and Mr. Lomasney want to reach the big fellows, Mr. Fuller was contented to stop with the little fellows."

WHAT A WOMAN SHOULD DO WHEN SHE IS WEAK AND NERVOUS

THOUSANDS OF WOMEN HAVE SURPRISINGLY INCREASED THEIR STRENGTH, ENERGY AND ENDURANCE IN TWO WEEKS TIME BY THIS SIMPLE EXPERIMENT

On account of the terrible weakness, nervousness and alarming symptoms which are often produced by iron starvation of the blood, the sufferer frequently never suspects the real cause of her trouble but thinks she has some other ailment. As a result of iron starvation you may suffer from headaches, dizziness, shortness of breath or heart palpitation, pains across the back, loss of memory, weak will power, melancholy or the "blues," disturbed digestion, loss of appetite, sleepless nights, nervousness and so on. In such cases do not wait until you go all to pieces and edge in a state of nervous prostration but use more spinach and green vegetables and take organic iron like Nuxated Iron with them for a while and see what a difference it makes. But be sure the iron you take is organic iron and not metallic iron which people usually take. Metallic iron comes from just as it comes from the action of acids on iron filings or pipes, while organic iron like Nuxated Iron is like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. Blaud's pills are tablets. Look for the name "Nuxated," on every tablet and for the letters N. I. on every tablet. Your money will be refunded by the manufacturers if they do not obtain perfectly satisfactory results. For sale by all druggists.—Advertisement.

CHINA SEEKS TO AMEND LEAGUE COVENANT

Would Change Monroe Doctrine Article So as to Guard Against Japan

By International News Service.

Geneva, April 5.—On the eve of the meeting here of the special committee appointed by the Council of the League of Nations to consider proposed amendments to the text of the League covenant, China today submitted a proposal to amend Article 21, which is designed to safeguard the Monroe doctrine. China suggests that this article be made to read:

"The Monroe Doctrine is recognized as not incompatible with any terms in the present pact."

(Note: In the present text the article couples the Monroe Doctrine with 'Other regional understandings' and China fears that Japan may seize upon this as meaning that it applies to Kiao-Chow and other Japanese claims to preferential treatment in China.)

Czecho Slovakia proposes an amendment establishing European Asiatic, American and South American branches of the League, under jurisdiction of the Council, to settle regional troubles.

Both amendments are to be taken up at tomorrow's meeting of the amendment committee, which is headed by Arthur J. Balfour.

G. A. R. Vet Finds Self Heir to $500,000

Lawrence, April 5.—To receive word that he has been named as one of the heirs to a $500,000 estate, was the pleasant surprise given one of Lawrence's oldest residents, John C. Smith, prominent Civil War veteran of Perry street, and his daughter, Mrs. Annie Sellera Blum of Chicago.

The two have inherited part of the fortune of Smith's brother, George A. Smith of Philadelphia, who died January 17. The Lawrence man and his daughter are the only living relatives. John C. Smith is the last living man who joined the first military company to enter the Civil War. He took part in every big battle of the war and was a member of Company F, First Massachusetts Heavy Artillery.

300 A.A.R.I.R. DELEGATES GO TO CONVENTION

Massachusetts Will Send Full Quota to Chicago for Conclave on 18th

Formal demand for the speedy recognition of the Irish Republic will be made at the first national convention of the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic, which opens in Chicago April 18, and will last two days.

It is expected that more than 5,000 delegates will attend the convention and that Massachusetts will send at least 300, representing the 175 local councils and the 150 Associated councils of the State. The New England delegates will travel in a special car.

Election of delegates to the convention is being held in the local and associate councils throughout the State. M. & J. Morgan will have charge of the plans and arrangements for the trip.

A special meeting of the State directorate has been called for Saturday evening at the American House to outline a plan of action to be submitted for approval to the delegates of the New England States, among which will be a drive upon the New England Senators and Representatives to force them to support the Mason bill and a resolution for the recognition of the Irish Republic.

An attempt will also be made to induce this government to insist upon a strict observance of the provisions of the Hague Convention of 1907 by the British government in her treatment of Irish prisoners of war.

BAGPIPERS LEAD SCOTCH MINERS IN RIOT

500 Strikers Attack Those Who Refuse to Join in Walkout

London, April 5.—Wild rioting was reported early today from the collieries near the little Scottish mining village of Bonhar in Linlithgowshire. A crowd of 500 striking miners, headed by bagpipes, overpowered the guards and attacked the workers who had refused to walk out.

Four policemen and several employes were injured. The rioters penetrated the pit of one mine and smashed much machinery.

At Shettleston an overseer was killed and a manager seriously injured in a mine explosion, the cause of which is still undetermined, though it is suspected to be due to sabotage.

In Lavendfehire a group of miners, led by a bagpiper, marched on the mine furnaces and forced the stokers and other workers to abandon their jobs.

It is declared today nothing short of an official effort to reopen negotiations with the coal miners or action by the House of Commons to rescind the order by which the government relinquished control of the mines can prevent a general industrial strike within the next forty-eight hours.

At Wrexham the miners passed a resolution asking the federation to issue arms instead of strike pay to the locked out miners.

Executives of the Transport Men's Union adopted resolutions declaring that if the owners and the government do not desire to reopen negotiations, the transport men will ask their members to cease work, including those engaged in work connected with shipping.

With murmurs of revolution in the air the labor situation today drifted in the direction of a national tie-up. Although the official decision will not be announced until tomorrow it is accepted as certain that a half million railroad workers will be ordered out on strike in sympathy with the locked out miners.

It is hardly less certain that another half million members of the transport unions will also strike, thus blocking all seagoing and railroad traffic.

The grave situation was considered by the Cabinet but there was no announcement afterward.

There are now 3,500,000 people idle. The government has completed a plan for feeding the nation in the event of the railroad strike and the transport tie-up. The government is ready to go to the limit to put down all disturbances.

On the Screen

By FRIEDA DAVIS.

THERE is more than a little interest attached to the showing of "The Witching Hour" at the Modern Theatre this week. First, because it is taken from the play by Augustus Thomas; second, because it deals with a strong theme that has been attracting public interest for several years; and third, because of the playing of Elliott Dexter.

The story is well known, therefore we need not go into it in detail. The scenario writer, Julia Crawford Ivers, has kept to the plot and has followed the play itself closely. Jack Brookfield's fight to prove the power of one's mind has been shown gradually and plausibly and the unfolding of the actual theory is excellent.

Elliott Dexter plays John Mason's role of Jack Brookfield, the gambler, who finds that through strength of mind and absolute knowledge and faith right will always triumph. He handles the part simply and easily and brings out the strength and weaknesses of the character. Dexter, who has been lost to the screen for some time, has a real understanding of the characterizations. He knows that effort and overacting are fatal to a picture and he works in conjunction with the author.

Mary Alden does exceptional work as Helen Whipple, the mother of the boy who was on trial for murder. Miss Alden has the beauty that is impressive; her face shows power and thought. "The Witching Hour" by William D. Taylor has been carefully thought out for the most part, but there are one or two scenes that break the continuity of the story.

ABOUT ELLIOTT DEXTER.

IT'S INTERESTING to say a word here about the peculiar fitness of having Elliott Dexter play the role of Jack Brookfield.

Jack Brookfield becomes interested in the power of mind, and in a small way, in mental telepathy. It is quite new to him, and a subject which he has given no thought. As he studies it grows on him until he finds out, not only that he can make his will work for him, but that he has always done it subconsciously. It is, he declares at the last, belief and knowledge.

Last week in New York we talked with Olga Printzlau. William DeMille's scenario writer about film matters and persons in Hollywood. Elliott Dexter's name came up and Miss Printzlau, of whom we shall tell more later, told of his story during the past few years.

Several seasons ago he was badly hurt in an accident and was left crippled. The doctors held out little hope for his recovery and he gave up all thought of walking again.

Then he realized that life would be unbearable and he refused to give in to discouragement. He had a firm belief that he would get well if he only made up his mind to. His faith became stronger each day and he became a little more active. He graduated from a wheel chair to crutches, from crutches to a cane, and today he is, as he expresses it, "as good as ever." He can walk, run, dance, and is back playing featured roles in films.

This mental condition has made a new man of him, he declares, and has improved his acting ability. Is it strange then that he can put such conviction and feeling into his part of Jack Brookfield?

"THE LITTLE CLOWN"

IN "The Little Clown," the other picture at the Modern theatre — with the assistance of Avery Hopwood — have given Mary Miles Minter an uncommonly good role. She is fast developing from the sweet flirty girl roles to those that have feeling and are human. A clever comedienne, she has opportunities galore for fun-making in this circus story as well as opportunities to play serious.

This story, Avery Hopwood told us a month or so ago, has already been made into play form and will be presented in a Broadway theatre next season.

WE were fortunate in being in New York in time for the big Motion Picture Directors' Ball at the Hotel Astor Saturday night. Run for, by and with directors, still it was crowded with most of the well known stars, players and writers in the East, as well as with hordes of fans who wanted to see their favorites at close range.

The ball room was crowded with wide-eyed girls who were getting real "thrills" at seeing Eugene O'Brien, Montague Love, Forrest Stanley and John Emerson in real life.

The stars were all there. Lillian Gish and her sister, Dorothy, the Talmadges, Pearl White, Alma Rubens, Anita Stewart, Mae Caprice, Marguerite Clayton, Mae Murray, Zena Keefe, Martha Mansfield, Marion Davies and all the rest. Completely surrounded by partners and wouldbe partners they could only be glimpsed now and then as they danced by.

Rodolfine came out and gave an exhibition of her Hawaiian dances, just as she does them on the screen. Then young Johnny Glines gave a burlesque of her hula dance and many did their specialties and kept things going until five o'clock. After that they all adjourned for breakfast at the various homes. Mrs. Sidney Drew gave a delightful breakfast-party at her apartment and when she left she took nearly half the crowd with her.

TROOPS MOVED INTO IRISH MINE AREAS

London Reports C... Are Accompanied by Tank Units

London, April 5.—The Daily Herald today prints dispatches stating that troops are on the move in Ireland.

According to the Herald, the mining areas are the destination of forces, which are accompanied by tanks.

The Ulster Nationalists, in convention at Belfast, with 300 delegates present, offered the presidency to Joseph Devlin, M. P. The convention decided that the new parliament, under the Home Rule measure, would be a source of danger to the lives and interests of the northern Nationalists and that they will neither recognize nor participate in the elections.

S. B. Y. C. PLANS TO ORGANIZE LIFE MEMBERS

In an effort to induce life members of the South Boston Yacht Club to renew their interest in the organization and visit the clubhouse more frequently, the club is to tender them a reception on Patriots' Day, Tuesday, April 19, at 2 p. m.

A lunch will be served and an organization of "Life Members of the S. B. Y. C." perfected. A special badge will be furnished the life members and it is the sincere wish of the committee that all of them who are able attend.

The regular meeting of the club will take place tomorrow evening at the clubhouse on the Strandway.

The house committee has planned a series of whist parties to be held in the clubhouse, the first to take place next Friday evening, April 8.

On the evening of Patriots' Day a dancing party is to be held. Refreshments will be served in the Dutch room.

A HOME-MADE GRAY HAIR REMEDY

You Can Make a Better Gray Hair Remedy Than You Can Buy.

Gray, streaked or faded hair is not only unbecoming, but unnecessary.

Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home that will darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ ounce of glycerine.

These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost, or the druggist will put it up for you. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It is easy to use, does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

LIQUOR PRICES TO FALL—FOR SICK

Druggists Can Now Get Whiskey and Wine at 25 Per Cent. Reduction

Washington, April 5.—A decline in prices of liquor for the sick was predicted today by prohibition officials. Whiskey, wine and other medicinal liquors, under the latest government order, are being bought by druggists direct from distillers' warehouses. This cuts out the middlemen's profits.

Officials in charge of enforcement said they have made it possible for retail druggists to save more than 25 per cent. in the cost for medicinal liquors and that this reduction should at once be reflected in a lower charge to the public.

SEVEN LEGION MEN UP ON GAMBLING CHARGES

Seven members of Bunker Hill post, American Legion, were in Charlestown court charged with being present where gaming implements and money stakes were found on the Lord's Day. They were arrested at post headquarters. Commander John F. Buckley of Bunker Hill post, who is an attorney, appeared for the defendants, and Judge Sullivan agreed to accept a plea of nolo. The cases were filed. The defendants were John Helmond, John E. Kyle, Edward Kehoe, William J. Degnan, Frank J. Murphy, Hugh J. Donnelly and Ben White.

WOMAN IN TRUNK THEFT HELD FOR OBSERVATION

Valera Busych, of Broadway, Chelsea, was in Chelsea court charged with the larceny of a trunk filled with clothing from Mrs. Frances Panayck. As the defendant was apparently afflicted by loss of memory, the case was continued until tomorrow pending an examination as to her sanity.

Curfew Law Rung on Manchester Girls

Manchester, N. H., April 5.—The police of Rochester have been instructed to rigidly enforce the curfew law, and all under sixteen years old will, if found on the streets after 9 o'clock at night unaccompanied by parents or guardians, be held up and questioned.

Orders for the enforcement of the curfew came after numerous complaints from social workers that young girls were frequenting dance halls and theatres unattended by proper persons and that conditions had reached a point where a check should be put upon them.

The initial move was made by Mrs. Mary Pelker, wife of ex-Governor Pelker, and the civic department of the Woman's Club, of which Mrs. Pelker is the chairman, took up the subject and a complaint was made to Mayor Kimball.

LAWRENCE CARPENTERS TO WORK FOR OLD WAGE

Lawrence, April 5.—Attention in labor circles is directed at the plan adopted by the carpenters involved in the strike of building tradesmen, which began April 1, when the master builders announced a cut of 20 per cent. in wages. Jobs requiring men, foremen, superintendents or any other employes in the carpenter line will be supplied by the carpenters' district council at the old union wage.

The carpenters and other employes involved in the strike believe that this will be the solution of the difficulty and will virtually break the strike not only here but in other centres where it now exists.

HAVERHILL MAN MADE PHILADELPHIA EDITOR

Haverhill, April 5.—Fred F. Shedd, formerly editor of the Haverhill Gazette, employed as editorial writer on the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin for the past ten years, has been made editor of the paper, succeeding the late William Perrine, who died in Philadelphia last Friday, after holding the position for twenty-five years. Mr. Shedd started newspaper work on the Lowell Courier-Citizen after graduating from the local High School in 1886.

FARMERS PLAN OWN MARKET, SAYS HAPGOOD

Tells Benefits to Nation of Co-operation Scheme Being Worked Out in Chicago

By NORMAN HAPGOOD

Editorial Correspondent of Boston American

Washington, April 5.—What is the most important thing happening in America this week? Zoo, it is not any talk centering around M. Viviani, for as a matter of fact nothing whatever has happened in our foreign relations that had not been fully established before M. Viviani came over.

Norman Hapgood

Indeed, it is not anything that focuses right here in this centre of administration, legislation, judicial decision and gossip. It is in my opinion something that is happening in the La Salle Hotel, in Chicago, in Illinois.

It makes some difference to the ordinary man that he pays a lot more than he ought to pay for bread, while the farmer gets less than he ought to get for wheat, but can the ordinary man do anything about it? Have you and I and the rest of us ordinary citizens brains enough to work it out?

Farmers to Make Their Own Markets

The farmers of this great agricultural country spring a real movement this week. Today the last touches are being put on a plan by a committee of seventeen. Wednesday and Thursday one hundred and seventeen representatives of the farmers of thirty-three States will decide whether or not to put the plan into immediate operation. The prospect is that they will decide to do it.

Would the ordinary fellow say offhand that the amount of American wheat sold in this country was the amount raised here minus what was exported? He might, but he would be wrong. The amount sold is, if my memory can be trusted, forty times the amount raised. That is one fact to take away and paste under your hats if you want to understand what is happening this week in Chicago. The farmer is trying to put an end to the wheat speculator.

The farmers mean to put in action their own marketing machinery on a National scale. They thus cut out waste in distribution, and it is to be remembered that most of the so-called cost of production is the cost of distribution. They lower excessive freight charges. They stabilize prices. They get for themselves the money that now goes to the middlemen.

To Throw Out Some Extra Guests

One of the committee of seventeen is a United States Senator, Edwin F. Ladd, of North Dakota. He puts it this way: "Once the farmer and his helper sat down opposite each other at the same table. In the same way the producer and the consumer were close together. Then a third fellow appeared at the table, and a leaf was put in to accommodate him. He was the middleman. Then another and another appeared, and soon another leaf was put in. After a long while there were so many new guests that the original two no longer had enough to eat."

So we are going to throw some of those extra guests away from the table and bring the producer and the consumer nearer together. The farmers have succeeded in doing it in a little country like Denmark. They did a good deal toward it before the war in Germany. The Russian peasants began it a long time ago, and in Siberia they copied a lot of Danish experience. Perhaps our farmers are up to the job.

Big Speculative Forces Worried

The selling of grain will be concentrated in the hands of a national sales association, with membership and voting control limited to actual grain growers. The big speculative distributors are worried. They believe the association will be formed. But they hope to influence the selection of the managers of the association and thus be in a position to put the movement on what is classically known as the "blink." It is a method applied with success not only in labor unions, but also in the North Dakota efforts of the non-Partisan League.

The farmers think they see the money to finance this effort. It will, of course, provide for the gathering of market information. It will have a subsidiary to take care of export shipments. It will control its supply by binding the members to market all their grain through the corporation for a period of probably five years.

In Denmark a particularly hard fight met the farmers when they started to pack their own hogs. The competing interests offered higher prices to the individual farmers. The co-operatives then tied their members up on ten-year contracts and speedily put the private packers out of business.

The attacks of the banks and the big packing and grain interests in the North Dakota co-operative efforts have not stopped those efforts. On the contrary, they have given impetus to this new effort to get away from one of the middlemen's big grafts, or if that word is libelous, from one of the middlemen's big leaks.

The committee hops that they can handle part of the 1921 crop under the new plan. Before long they hope to become the dominant factor on the market. The Farmers' Association will sell only to cash buyers, and in this way they expect before long to kill the speculative business in grain altogether. They will stabilize the price by stabilizing the movement of the grain.

Cousin of Webster Is Dead at 101

Manchester, N. H., April 5.—Mrs. Mary Jane Wheeler, 101 years old, and probably the oldest resident of New Hampshire, is dead at her home in Canterbury, N. H.

She observed her 101st birthday anniversary March 28, and was apparently in good health at that time. Her death was due to pneumonia with which she was stricken on the following day.

Mrs. Wheeler was the daughter of Jacob and Hannah Blanchard, and was a cousin of Daniel Webster. She married Captain John Wheeler in 1837 and was the mother of ten children.

DEATH FOR ATTACKERS OF FOREIGNERS IN MEXICO

Mexico City, April 5.—The death penalty is to be the punishment for all those who attempt outrages on the lives and property of foreigners in Mexico. The penalty is provided for in a bill which is to be introduced in Congress at the suggestion of President Obregon, Ignacio Prastow, chairman of the legislative committee of the Chamber of Deputies, announced.

KNOX'S PEACE RESOLVE GOES IN AT ONCE

Move to End War Status With Germany to Be Laid Before New Congress

Washington, April 5.—From an unquestionable source, it was learned today that Senator Knox will reintroduce his resolution terminating the technical state of war between the United States and Germany immediately after Congress assembles next Monday, and that Republican leaders have determined upon its prompt passage.

PIMPLY? WELL, DON'T BE

People Notice It. Drive Them Off with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you get a package of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights.

Cleanse the blood, bowels and liver with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel; there's no sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with a "dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face.

Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints, and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result. Take one or two nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 15c and 30c.—Advertisement.

Removes Hairy Growths Without Pain or Bother

(Modes of Today)

It is not necessary to use a painful process to remove hairy growths, for with a little dejatone handy you can keep the skin entirely free from these beauty destroyers. To remove hair, make a stiff paste with a little powdered dejatone and water. Spread this on the hairy surface and in about 2 minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. To guard against disappointment, be careful to get real dejatone. Mix fresh as wanted.—Advertisement.

Coming Events

WILBUR THEATRE—Next Monday night, "Blossom Time," the most important musical offering of the current season, comes to the Wilbur Theatre. It is produced by Messrs. Lee and J. J. Shubert, staged by J. C. Huffman, sung and acted by a cast commanding interest. The story is of the life of Franz Schubert, the famous composer, adapted by Dorothy Donelly, with melodies by Schubert and Sigmund Romberg. Its cast, headed by Ralph Herz, includes such artists as Colin O'Moore, Belram Peacock, Olga Cook and Zoe Barnett.

SHUBERT THEATRE — Gladsome tidings emanating from the Shubert Theatre announce the arrival there, Monday evening, April 18, of "The Whirl of the Town," first of Messrs. Lee and J. J. Shubert's 9 o'clock Century Promenade shows to leave Broadway. A gingery gamut of gamboling gaiety, girt with good cheer and grins, and headed by the recently arrived Belgian chanteuse, Mlle. Anna Codee.

COLONIAL THEATRE — A week from tonight at the Colonial Theatre A. L. Erlanger will present his new musical comedy production, "Two Little Girls in Blue." Mr. Erlanger, to this show, has aimed not only to rival his previous productions, but to far excel them. The book was written by Fred Jackson, accomplished writer of many successes. The music is by Paul Lannin and Vincent Youmans, with lyrics by Arthur Francis, and it was staged by Ned Wayburn. A brilliant cast has been assembled with a carefully selected beauty chorus. Seats go on sale today.

TREMONT THEATRE — After a protracted absence from Boston Fiske O'Hara will begin a two weeks' engagement at the Tremont Theatre next Monday in his new play, "Springtime in Mayo," written by Anna Nichols Duffy. Described as an Irish melody drama in three acts, Mr. O'Hara has won his greatest success in this play.

ARLINGTON THEATRE — "Quincy Adams Sawyer," most widely read novel and best beloved play of New England rural life, begins a week's engagement at the Arlington Theatre next Monday night.

BOSTON THEATRE — Alice Joyce, in her latest screen masterpiece, "Her Lord and Master," a gripping story of love and passion, is the photoplay feature at the Boston Theatre this week.

HENRY MILLER AT HOLLIS

By FRED J. McISAAC.
Dramatic Editor

"The Famous Mrs. Fair" at the Hollis, is a play for husbands. Wives will like it too, but probably not so much. For there are few women who are married, with children and homes, who haven't yearned for a career of some sort at one time or another, usually just after the old man has fussed about some bills and they hate to see a lady who has had a remarkable career lambasted for staying away from home too much.

James Forbes wrote "The Famous Mrs. Fair." He is the author of "The Show Shop," "The Chorus Lady," and other dramas, mostly funny. This is far and away the best play he ever wrote, in fact it is one of the best plays I have seen in ten years.

AUTHOR IN LUCK.

This may be because I agree so heartily with Mr. Forbes' opinion of ladies who leave their husbands to go to war or upon the lecture platform, and it may be a free and unprejudiced opinion. As I said above, husbands will like it better than wives.

The author had great luck in securing such people as Blanche Bates and Henry Miller to play the leading roles in his play. An author who makes a couple of fifty his heroine and hero, instead of a flapper and a college Hercules, is in great luck in finding anybody to take his play.

But between you and me it's a great relief not to follow the tribulations of a nineteen-year-old girl who is beautiful, but half witted, until she falls into the arms of a youth of twenty-five with patent leather hair.

MOTHER IN CENTRE.

To be sure there is a beautiful and half-witted flapper in "The Famous Mrs. Fair," but mother occupies the geometrical centre of the platform when she can push father out of it.

To be brief, Mrs. Fair has been to war in a horizon blue uniform and been elected a major of Ford ambulances. She has left the family about four years. When she comes home bedraggled with Croix des Guerre the old man, and the son and daughter welcome her with open arms, but ma has the fever and signs up for a lecture tour lasting three or four months.

As a result father falls for a blonde vampire, daughter left to her own devices, plays the cabarets and son marries a stenographer, a pretty good bet, by the way. When mother returns she is made to realise that a woman's place is in the home, suffrage to the contrary, and not withstanding.

MILLER WELL SUITED.

All this sounds a bit flippant, and is perhaps unfair because Mr. Forbes has written with great sincerity, avoided theatricalisms, improbable situations and flapdoodle. As I said before, it is a very good play, but the wives who think they can sing, act, dance, play the fiddle and run women's clubs won't like it.

Blanche Bates is as fortunate as the author to find a play, which enables her emotionalism, her artistry and her clean cut methods to have full scope. And as the good natured and neglected husband, Miller has a role better suited to his present gifts than anything in years.

Margola Gilmore, a very young actress, as the daughter, deserves special praise for playing quite an arduous role very skillfully. Jack Devereaux, Kathleen Comegys and Virginia Hammond were noticeable in an especially good troupe.

WALDRON'S CASINO—The "Maids of America" company is the attraction at Waldron's Casino. Bobby Barry, son of the famous comedian, Billy Barry, is again the star of the organization. Others in the company are George Leon, George E. Snyder, Marrigan and Howarth, Jane Mae, Charles and the Three Jolly Bachelors, one of vaudeville's well known trios. There is a big chorus of real beauties.

COLUMBIA THEATRE—A delightful program is being offered the initial three days of this week at Loew's Columbia Theatre, topped by four splendid acts of vaudeville and the showing of "The Restless Sex," with an all-star cast, including Marion Davies. Last evening Sam Cohen's Amateurs were an added attraction of interest.

Plays That Remain

MAJESTIC THEATRE—The second week of Joe Weber's successful musical comedy "Honeydew" is a continuous triumph of tunefulness, scenic art, theatrical artistry and youthful artlessness.

WILBUR THEATRE — "Gertie's Garter" was unloosed at this playhouse for a single week beginning last evening. It is a furiously fast farce, well knit and full of action.

TREMONT THEATRE—David Belasco's production of Jean Archibald's comedy, "Call the Doctor," began its concluding week at the Tremont Theatre last evening. This attraction has proved one of the theatrical delights of the season.

COLONIAL THEATRE — George White's "Scandals of 1920" began its fourth and final week at the Colonial Theatre last evening. A bright and breezy musical revue with many able entertainers, this attraction is so far above the ordinary that it has served to draw theatregoers in generous numbers.

GLOBE THEATRE— "The Storm," which is now a "raging" hit at the Globe Theatre, enters on its second week with thousands marvelling at its spectacular aspects and its beautiful romance of the great Northwest.

PARK SQUARE THEATRE — William Courtenay and Lois Fisher are now on the eve of their final fortnight in the Hub, after an engagement of four months in Rod Cooper Megrue's splendid and satisfying comedy at Selwyn's Park Square Theatre.

SHUBERT THEATRE—"The Greenwich Village Follies, 1920," now in its last two weeks at the Shubert Theatre, is undoubtedly the greatest musical success of the season. This revisical comedy is full of pep and life and has many scenes of rare beauty.

TREMONT TEMPLE — Yesterday afternoon D. W. Griffith's "Way Down East" began its twenty-ninth week of its continuous run in Boston at Tremont Temple. No cinema work since the beginning of this greatest of all popular amusements has equalled the record of Griffith's "Way Down East" in Boston.

GOOD ACTS ON KEITH BILL

An all around good bill is offered for the entertainment of B. F. Keith's Theatre patrons this week.

Yvette Rugel, the miniature prima donna, although not billed as a headliner, was really the big bit of the show in the minds of the large audience, who applauded her set enthusiastically.

She sang many songs familiar to her hearers and ended up with "The Swanee River" in minor, which brought down the house.

Another big feature act was that of Brown and O'Donnell, a pair of nimble dancers, who sang some, cracked a few jokes and burlesqued the previous acts on the bill.

Valerie Bergere, in a pleasing skit entitled "The Moth," showed that women shouldn't leave their husbands and run off with other men.

"Doc" Baker and his revue offered an attractive novelty, the company of clever girls exhibiting some stunning costumes. Polly Walker added much to the act by her attractive looks and dainty dancing.

Other good acts on the program were: Lester, the ventriloquist; the Parkers, in a gymnastic exhibition; Jack Daly and Hazel Beriew, who danced dizzily; Jack Ryan and Earl Bronson, songsters, and Maud Muller and Ed Stanley.

"THE PORCELAIN LAMP" SHOWN NEXT SUNDAY

Members of the faculty of Harvard College, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, the School Committee and educators from other institutions about the city will be guests at the special showing of "The Porcelain Lamp," the new historical motion picture, at the Majestic Theatre, Sunday evening, April 10.

The photoplay is an elaborate production of an entirely new order and is exciting unusual comment wherever it has been shown. Among the well known screen favorites in the cast are Doris Sheerin and Eugene Borden.

Most of the scenes of the story are laid in Alsace, the home of Anton Dalmier, the man accredited with the discovery of gasoline.

"The Porcelain Lamp" will be shown only next Sunday night and the attendance will be by invitation, for the most part, though tickets in limited numbers may be had on request from Bryant G. Smith & Sons Company, No. 661 Beacon street.

ROSE SHOW WILL OPEN TOMORROW IN BACK BAY

The Crimson Rambler rose, probably the best known of all the climbing roses, brought to England years ago by the engineer of a British steamer, will form the chief background in a large number of the exhibits at the Rose Show which opens in Horticultural Hall tomorrow for five days.

Hundreds of other varities, rich in beauty and fragrance will also be shown, while in addition there will be a generous display of orchids, azaleas, acacias and carnations.

Other Theatres

ORPHEUM THEATRE—The Kinkaid Kilties are topping the program for the initial half of the week at Loew's Orpheum Theatre, and offer a splendid new Scotch revue. Other acts include George Randall & Co. in a comedy playlet; Le Vey & Weist, in a pianologue; Jim Conners and Hazel Boyne, in a comedy diversion; Braxton & Hawkins, versatile colored entertainers; and the gladiators, Siegel & Irving, in a classic of athletic art. Gladys Brockwell has a brand new type of role in "The Sage Hen," in which she appears as the young and beautiful mother, and later as the aged and haggard mother of a grown son, who fights with the viciousness of a tiger when her cub is in danger.

MODERN AND BEACON—The feature at the Modern and Beacon Theatres this week is "The Witching Hour," a picturesque dramatization of Augustus Thomas' famous play of the same name. There are many intense moments in the picture, all of which tend to lift it far above the ordinary screen offering. It is followed by Mary Miles Minter in "The Little Clown," a "big top" story by Avery Hopwood, author of many comedy successes. It will fascinate the children with its visioning of clowns, bareback riders and real animals.

PARK THEATRE — Hugo Ballin's production of "East Lynne," being shown at the Park Theatre this week, is a clean cut, dignified rendition of the time-honored novel by Mrs. Henry Wood that we recognize in it a work in an art far above the standards of the day.

This is followed by "Society Secrets," with Eva Novak. The charming star appears as a fashionable New York girl who starts out to investigate the parents of her fiance and to discover whether they can be properly introduced in the exclusive social circles. She finds them simple country folks, but discovers a way to make them entirely acceptable.

GORDON'S OLYMPIA — William S. Hart's latest Paramount picture of the West, "Wagon of the Mounted," scored a triumph at its presentation at Gordon's Olympia Theatre last night. It is one of the strongest character portrayals with which Mr. Hart has yet favored his followers. Thrills abound throughout the action of this virile photoplay.

SCOLLAY SQUARE OLYMPIA — The picture this week at Gordon's Scollay Square Olympia is "The Truth About Husbands," a version of Pinero's play, "The Profligate."

GORDON'S OLD SOUTH—Mae Murray is back in her ever popular role of a dancer in her latest picture, "The Gilded Lily," by Clara Beranger, which was presented with success at Gordon's Old South yesterday. Miss Beranger wrote the story especially for the blond star and was able to create a role that is one of the best we have ever played.

GORDON'S STRAND—In the opening and closing scenes of "Kismet," the Robertson-Cole super-special, with Otis Skinner in the leading role, which opened at Gordon's Strand, Upham's Corner, last night, and incidental to the story itself are two of the funniest sequences of scenes that have ever been photographed in motion pictures.

SPICY FARCE PLEASES

Maxine Isabelle Flood, the latest addition to the Arlington Players, made her initial appearance last evening at the Arlington Theatre in "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," one of the most amusing of the many suggestive farces given to the stage by A. H. Woods.

Miss Flood, although only twenty-three years old, has been on the stage for seven years and has had a wealth of theatrical experience which many older persons might well envy.

The story of "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," deals with the escapades of the mild and innocent young husband whose wife loves him because she thinks he is a gay Lothario. The young man is desperately in love with his wife but as innocent of experience as a babe.

Nevertheless, he is compelled to sustain his wife's illusions and reluctantly goes the way of folly. Things begin to happen to him. He finds himself in a lonely wayside inn which, through a combination of unforeseen circumstances, is turned into a veritable seraglio.

Miss Flood plays the part originally created by Florence Moore while Frances Grayson is seen as the erring wife, and William Shelly Sullivan plays the role created by John Slumberland.

The play is well staged and the work of the Arlington Players is commendable.

SOMERVILLE THEATRE—Fred E. Wright's "York State Folks" called forth unusual crowds for the two performances of yesterday afternoon and evening at the popular Somerville Theatre and the exceptional interest manifested, in this delightful rustic masterpiece is more than gratifying to Manager Clyde E. McArdle, who has labored long to make it a highlight of the season.

It is the pleasant and most wholesome play ever written for comedic purposes.

Mr. George Hartford,
Chicago Herald & Examiner,
Chicago, Ill.
Dear Mr. Hartford:-
Now that our campaign in Chicago has been completed, we want to express our gratitude to the Herald and Examiner for the splendid co-operation given us in connection with our entry into the Chicago market.
We know you will be interested to learn that every jobber sold during our campaign has since reordered. As a result, we feel no hesitancy in saying that we believe we have the Herald and Examiner to thank in large part, not only for our splendid Chicago distribution, but for the substantial and profitable consumer demand that we have built up in your territory.
HENRY MAILLARD INC.
Vice-President
CLO:AMH

Judge it by what it has done

THE Chicago Herald and Examiner has served many manufacturers in securing adequate distribution of their products in the Chicago market. That the service rendered was satisfactory is evidenced by the many letters received from these advertisers. To quote one of them:

"We would consider it a gross injustice to say anything but praise for your service. It is most complete and exhaustive, yet simple and easily understood.

"This service was contracted for by me after reaching Chicago—and it did not take me many minutes to decide after having it explained. In a few words, I bought it because I thought it a good buy. Our success with the campaign has fully justified this belief."

First Distribution—Then Advertising

In the case of every manufacturer, dealer distribution and co-operation was secured before a line of advertising appeared. The cost was surprisingly low. And then, with the appearance of the advertising, consumer demand was awakened.

With a product of merit plus a fair dealer profit, the plan that the Merchandising Department of the Herald and Examiner has developed and perfected will serve you as efficiently as it has many other manufacturers. Focus your attention on Chicago, the richest market in the world. It Will Pay!

We shall be glad to send you an exposition of the Merchandising Plan of the Chicago Herald and Examiner. Write for it today. It obligates you in no way.

HERALD CHICAGO MAGNET EXAMINER

ALL $5,000 TEST TITLES ARE IN DAILY LIST

Not So Much Complaint Now That Pictures Are Too Easy to Gue

While there are no "elephants" in today's Test Picture, participants in the $5,000 Movie Play Ple Test will observe other suggestions that the Ringling show, with Mr. Dexter Fellows and the Strange People, is not for a week.

Today's picture is No. 38. Three weeks more, and you will be "sending them in." Be sure to get them right. The correct title is in the List of Titles.

TO PRINT CORRECT TITLES.

Within a day or two after the close of the present Test we shall begin publishing the Test Pictures over again, probably at the rate of two a day. The correct title will be printed under each picture. This will give everybody a chance to check his own standing. He will not have to wait for the official report.

It is more than possible that many of you will get the correspon of your life while the pass-Test publication of pictures is on. "Easy" isn't any a word!

Four or five days, now, since anything was heard from the young man who was writing all the "letters" and getting them RIGHT. Wonder what's become of him. Can it be that he has quit? . . Cannot help thinking, by the way, that according to all accounts the Mayor did not make such a wonderful showing in the Player Test. Most of the Big Money, they say, was at Headquarters, goes to the ladies.

NO BACK NUMBERS.

The Title Test Editor is extremely sorry, but he is unable to fill orders for back numbers of the papers. This office does not sell them. The writer would feel worse about this if, time and time again, he had not urged everybody to be on the safe side and leave a standing order for the Boston American and the Sunday Advertiser.

One of our correspondents asks us PLEASE to print the correct identifications of the 120 pictures when, one week from next Sunday, we give the names and addresses of the winners in the Movie Player Test.

The request was quite unnecessary. The Test would be incomplete—and worse—if we failed to do that. The names will be printed and, not only that, but with them a record of the correct and satisfactory unveiling of the famous "masks."

Mayor's $45,000 'Hobo' Bill Turned Down

Mayor Peters underwent the rigors of his much-heralded overnight stay at Wayfarers' Lodge, the city lodging house, where an early morning encasement with the woodpile recompenses the city for bed and board, all for nothing.

The Mayor endured having his handsome brown suit defumed, listened, sleepless, to the staccato coughing of his fellow "down and outers," arose at 5 o'clock and chopped wood for four hours, and then—

The City Council killed his loan order for $45,000 to institute improvements at the lodge, even the Coo-Coos deserting the Peters standard. Councillors Hagan, Lane and Collins for once joined hands with the "gang" represented by Councillors Moriarty and Watson in opposing it.

SEEK MAYOR'S AID AGAINST OIL TANKS

Want Approval of Action of City Council in Refusing Permit for Well

South Boston residents headed by ex-Representative Robert E. Bigney sought a conference with Mayor Peters today to get his approval on the action of the city council in refusing to allow the Michigan Tanking & Extracting Company to lock's oil tanks underground at East First and P streets.

The action of the council is looked upon as a victory by residents of this section, who have fought since last July to keep out the tanks. The company was represented by Colonel Edward L. Logan.

The company's petition has engaged the attention of city and State officials for nearly a year. First it was the street commissioners, then the mayor and council, and finally Colonel Foote of the State Department of Public Safety. He suggested an underground location for the tanks, and back came the petition on its rounds once more. If the mayor does not turn it down it will go to Colonel Foote again.

The council also made it necessary to secure their consent to future tank locations by passing a rule requesting the street commissioners to refer future petitions for 1,000 gallons capacity tanks, or more, to the city council for action.

FIRST LAWRENCE WOMAN POLICE OFFICER AT WORK

Lawrence, April 5.—Miss Nora Hertlein, Lawrence's first policewoman is on the job. She was given a private office at police headquarters, with supervision over matters of all juveniles in Lawrence and will preside over the "nonsentence court" every Saturday morning in the city marshal's office. She made a preliminary inspection of the dance halls and will be a frequent visitor at the movies to act as censor.

CORSARO TRIAL MUST GO ON, RULES JUDGE

Motion to Dismiss Indictment of Alleged Lawrence Slayer Is Denied

Lawrence, April 5.—At the opening of the murder trial of Sabino Corsaro, charged with killing Michael Larolonda, in Superior Criminal Court here, Judge Louis S. Cox denied a motion to have the murder indictment dismissed on the ground that notice of the indictment had not been duly served on Corsaro after it was returned. The court overruled a second motion made by John P. Kane, counsel for the accused, which set forth that Lawrence was not sufficiently represented in the panel. When court opened today nine jurors had been selected.

The alleged murder was committed in a pool room on Elm street on January 24, 1920, following an argument between two men. The murdered man was acting as peacemaker when he was shot three times.

The notice of the indictment was served on Corsaro by the prison superintendent at the Rutland State Sanitarium, where Corsaro was being treated for consumption. The defense claimed that the notice should have been served by a sheriff. District Attorney S. Howard Donnell was sustained in his argument that an Essex County sheriff could not serve indictment notice outside the county.

It was feared that the defendant would not survive until the trial because of his condition. He appeared emaciated and seemed to lack interest in the proceedings. He pleaded not guilty.

SOUL WEIGHER'S LIBRARY DONATED TO HOSPITAL

Haverhill, April 5.—The library of the late Dr. Duncan MacDougal, the physician who gained widespread notoriety by claiming to have weighed a human soul, has been donated to the Gale Hospital by his widow. It consists of 150 rare and valuable medical works.

$3,459,500 TO PROVIDE WORK

Ten Loan Orders Passed by City Council for Varied Public Works

Ten loan orders totalling $3,459,500 intended to provide a substantial measure of relief for unemployment through public works, passed by the City Council, were in Mayor Peters' hands for his signature today.

The largest of these is $1,500,000 for sewerage works which, in view of the mild weather, are to be undertaken at once. Next largest in point of expenditure is $900,000 for the making of flyways.

While these will give employment largely to common labor, skilled labor will also be taken care of in the erection of several buildings. At the City Hospital it is planned to spend $625,000 for the remodelling of the clinical building and a new outpatient building, and $150,000 for the Thorndike Memorial building.

For the rebuilding of Chelsea Soath bridge $600,000 is provided. The council also voted $150,000 for a new site and the erection of a court house in Forest Hills and $35,000 for a branch library in West Roxbury.

The sum of $78,000 was added for the new projected municipal building in the South End, and $7,000 was added for the remodelling of the head house and construction of the bathhouse at Marine Park, South Boston.

Ten Loan Orders Passed by City Council for Varied Public Works

Ten loan orders totalling $3,459,500 intended to provide a substantial measure of relief for unemployment through public works, passed by the City Council, were in Mayor Peters' hands for his signature today.

The largest of these is $1,500,000 for sewerage works which, in view of the mild weather, are to be undertaken at once. Next largest in point of expenditure is $900,000 for the making of flyways.

While these will give employment largely to common labor, skilled labor will also be taken care of in the erection of several buildings. At the City Hospital it is planned to spend $625,000 for the remodelling of the clinical building and a new outpatient building, and $150,000 for the Thorndike Memorial building.

For the rebuilding of Chelsea Soath bridge $600,000 is provided. The council also voted $150,000 for a new site and the erection of a court house in Forest Hills and $35,000 for a branch library in West Roxbury.

The sum of $78,000 was added for the new projected municipal building in the South End, and $7,000 was added for the remodelling of the head house and construction of the bathhouse at Marine Park, South Boston.

G. O. P. SHIFTS JOBS AT GRANITE SATE FARM

Manchester, N. H., April 5.—James M. George has been named by the Republican state committee as superintendent of Hillsborough County Farm and Home of Correction at Grasmere, succeeding John W. Sanger, who has held the office for two years, being appointed when the Democrats obtained control of the county, which was won back by the Republicans last Fall.

SOUL WEIGHER'S LIBRARY DONATED TO HOSPITAL

Haverhill, April 5.—The library of the late Dr. Duncan MacDougal, the physician who gained widespread notoriety by claiming to have weighed a human soul, has been donated to the Gale Hospital by his widow. It consists of 150 rare and valuable medical works.

'BLACK AND TAN' ATTACK ON MALLOW VIVID STORY OF REPRISAL

The Boston American today prints the fifth in a series of extracts from the report of the American Commission on Conditions in Ireland. This report was drawn up by a committee of Americans, few of them of Irish blood or birth, and is a scathing arraignment of the British government.

What is a Black and Tan "reprisal"?

Americans have read much of these savage and bloody onslaughts and have received conflicting statements as to their nature.

In today's instalment in the Boston American of the report of the American Commission on Conditions in Ireland the question is answered thus:

"Reprisals sometimes consist in promiscuous killing of unarmed men, women and children, as in the case of the football crowd at Croke Park.

"Usually, however, the word is used to designate the burning, looting and 'shooting up' of Irish towns, as in Thurles, Galway, Cork, Tuam, Mallow, Templemore, Granard and Tipperary."

The report gives a vivid description of the "reprisal" carried out at Mallow Town. That reprisal was in revenge for the killing of a soldier by Republicans raiding for arms. The soldier was armed. The men who killed him did it in open fight. They were not from Mallow. But the military cried out for blood, and agreed what happened, as described to the American Commission:

KNEW WHAT TO EXPECT.

"Everybody knew what was coming, from what had happened in other towns. The senior officer at Buttevant is in charge of the district that Mallow is in. He and some officers came to Mallow by motor immediately to see what had happened. The three ministers of the town waited on this colonel, and they asked for protection of the town from any reprisals. The officer in charge of the troops gave a guarantee that no reprisals would take place. He gave a guarantee to the Roman Catholic priest, to the Protestant rector, Canon Harmon, and the Presbyterian minister, Rev. Mr. Baker. I forgot to mention that the clergymen in consultation had also wired General Macready, who was commander of the forces in Ireland at this time.

"About four o'clock in the afternoon an aeroplane came from Fermoy, the second largest military station in Ireland, and dropped a communication in the barrack yard. After that it flew to Buttevant, and then flew back to Fermoy. We concluded in the town that it was some sort of agreement between the forces.

TROOPS DASH IN.

"About half-past ten a lorry of troops arrived in Mallow from Buttevant, and about five minutes after two more lorries arrived with troops from Fermoy. Fermoy is about fifteen miles east of Mallow and Buttevant about seven miles north.

"The first thing they did was to fire revolver and rifle shots and scream and fire around the town. The first thing after that they did was to hold some of the public houses and loot them and put down. And then they marched to the Town Hall, the seat of the town council. It was a fine old building—about 150 years old. The stairways of the hall and the doors and the ceilings, of course, were all timber. They were sprinkled all over with petrol, and some incendiary bombs thrown into it, and it was set afire."

"Testimony has been submitted to us which purports to show that during 1917 Imperial British forces perpetrated in Ireland 7 murders, 18 armed assaults on unarmed men, and 11 raids on private houses; arrested 345 civilians, court-martialed 24, and deported 24, forcibly dispersed 5 public meetings, and suppressed 2 newspapers.

"During the year 1917 the testimony shows that not a single member of the Imperial British forces was slain in Ireland, except a member of the R. I. C. who shot himself while toying with a baton charge and afterwards died of his injury. In 1917 the Irish prisoners are alleged to have endured 450 outrages, including 17 murders, and resulted from retaliation.

"During 1920, the British 'reprisal' policy was instituted. It demonstrably consists in an acute intensification of the already long prevailing British policy of terror. The official statement by the assassination of British military, was not confined to areas in which these assassinations occurred, and was not absent from areas where there had been no assassinations. It was, therefore, not in any sense one of retaliation, either justifiable or unjustifiable, on the part of the party which attacked it. The official use of the term 'reprisal' would consequently seem to us the stereotyped euphemism, intended to lead the British and other people into condoning an aggravation of the Imperial British terrorism in Ireland."

MRS. STOKES TO DESCRIBE HER WEDDED LIFE

Will Take Stand in Her Own Defence When Trial Resumes Thursday

New York, April 5.—The Stokes divorce trial will be resumed Thursday morning. This was agreed on between counsel. Supreme Court Justice Finch will hear testimony.

Mrs. Helen Elwood Stokes will be the chief if not the first witness. Your correspondent will testify for her, including Hal Billig, her cousin; Edgar T. Wallace, whose Thirty-eighth street apartment has played an important part in the case; Will Myers, an old school mate of Mrs. Stokes, and George Schroeder, mining engineer.

Stokes' side of the case is virtually complete. He probably will take the stand toward the end of the trial to testify regarding the charges of cruelty which his wife has made against him, but under the law little other testimony will be in addition to his. Save for a few hours with Stokes on the stand, the rest of the trial will be devoted to Mrs. Stokes' case.

The young wife, it was learned, will deny ever visiting Wallace's flat, or ever seeing him after her marriage.

Wallace will corroborate this testimony. He says he has not planned a separation. Mrs. Stokes will review her married life of the past ten years.

Four years ago tomorrow America entered the World War. Hundreds of thousands of her sturdy sons went "over there," and today many of them nestle under a mantle of budding poppies and new verdure.

Many returned and took up their normal life, with its joys and sorrows and struggles.

But among this vast army of returning heroes were many who could not, despite their willingness, take their place in the busy life of America. They are the wounded, the maimed and the blind, who languish in hospitals, perhaps forgotten save for relatives and near friends.

Remember these heroes, the vanguard of a new civilization. Remember them in some manner, if you do nothing more than visit them at their hospitals and whisper words of cheer. Give, if you can, of the things that make life a little better to live for.

A book, a few flowers, some tobacco, a sweet or two, these are but little things, yet they carry a world of cheer to these deserving men.

If you are unable to personally visit the wounded veterans, whatever gift you may care to make will be cheerfully distributed to the men by the Y. D. Auxiliary, Y. D. Club, Huntington avenue.

"Lest We Forget"

The painful warrior famoused for fight,
After a thousand victories, once foil'd,
Is from the books of honors razed quite,
And all the rest forgot for which he toiled.

—Shakespeare Sonnet.

REPORT SOVIET RELEASES INDUSTRIES

Paris Hears Moscow Factories Are Being Returned to Former Owners

Paris, April 5.—The Soviet government, according to advices from Moscow, has decided to denationalize all factories now operating with those in the Moscow district. The Russian economic council has ordered that factories and mines are being turned back to their former foreign owners for exploitation.

The above dispatch may be of tremendous significance since it indicates a momentous change in the economic policy of the Soviet government, which is not unlikely the direct result of the recent pronouncements of the American State Department in which Secretary Hughes announced America would be glad to resume friendly relations with Russia provided that Moscow gave proof of a peaceful, safe and solid foundation for such relations.

The Paris Foreign Office, being informed of the above dispatch, must be supposed to have given the news from Moscow its own interpretation.

Nationalization has been one of the pillars of the Soviets' economic policy from the outset and has put capital in other countries as the main obstacle to peace with Russia.

MALDEN WOMAN FIGHTS OFF ATTACKER

Mrs. Carlson Drives Away Man Who Grabbed Her Handbag

Mrs. William Carlson, of No. 186 Waite street, Malden, successfully fought off an unidentified man who attempted to rob her while she was walking along Church street on her way home.

The man walked a few paces behind Mrs. Carlson for a short distance, then accosted her and attempted to wrench a handbag from her wrist. For several minutes she wrestled and fought with her assailant who gave up the fight and ran down Church street, making his escape before help arrived.

TRADING DULL BUT TONE IMPROVES

New Haven Sells Higher on Boston Exchange; Cuth List Is More Active

There was a better tone to the Boston market at the opening and, although the list was irregular as to price alterations, the majority of active issues sold a little higher. It had a quiet start and about the most interesting development of the first hour was the advance of New Haven. It gained more than a point. The market remained narrow in every sense. About half of the issues to come out were unchanged on the first transactions. Packing issues were heavy. Very little attention was given coppers.

Stocks to make fractional gains were American Telephone, American Woolen preferred, Massachusetts Gas, United Shoe, American Sugar preferred, Simms Magneto, North Butte and Utah Consolidated. Small losses were shown by Ahmeek, Mohawk, Utah Metal, Agricultural Chemical preferred, National Leather, Libby and Swift & Co.

CURB MORE ACTIVE

The Curb was more animated at the outset, the majority of active issues on this exchange selling higher. The trend was upward during the first hour. Leaders were: Boston & Montana, United Verde Extension, which sold ex-dividend, and Eureka. Issues to gain at the opening included Beadgid, Daddy, Eureka, Eureka South, Holly, Palisade and Verde Mines. Among those to recede at once were Dimpire Food, Black Hawk and Boston & Montana.

At the end of an hour Boston & Montana was up 1 cent at 6¼ cents, Eureka 8 cents at 99 cents and Boston Ely 4 cents at 45 cents. Alpha was off 2 cents at 70 cents. Black Hawk had recovered its loss and United Verde Extension had recovered its dividend.

BOSTON FINANCIAL NOTES.

In March the New River Co. produced 146,000 tons of coal, compared with 160,000 tons in February.

The Allouez Gas Light Co. has been authorized to issue 3,500 shares of new capital stock, par $100. The proceeds are to pay off floating indebtedness and to enlarge its plant.

At the end of last year the Boston Elevated Railway had 5,000 preferred stockholders and 4,000 common stockholders.

The business of the Boston Wharf Co., Blodgett & Emmons, agents, will be continued and will be conducted as Harvey Fisk & Sons.

The East Butte Copper Mining Co. had at the end of 1920 a surplus after deducting operations of $208,630, equal to 49 cents per share, compared with $292,180 or $1.40 a share in 1919, $722,453 or $3.51 in 1918, and $1,021,-102 or $5.10 in 1917.

Fort Hoquiam Co. is associated with Scobey Co. in New York but will remain a factor in the Wyoming field, according to Dauber & Moor and retain its interests in the latter.

The Boston bank statement of April 2 shows $1,500 reserve deficiency and a net decrease of $5,048,000 for the week ended March 26. Loans due and overdue and $2,-137,000 of time deposits thereafter cash in banks will not be included.

Corporation Reports

For 1920 the Steel & Tube Co. of America reports surplus after charges, depletion, depreciation and shrinkage of inventories of $6,915,000, which is equal to $36.08 a share earned on $17,500,000 preferred.

Bethlehem Steel reports for 1920 net after charges and Federal taxes of $2,818,900, equivalent after preferred dividends to $1.07 a share on common, against $4,294,602, or $17.80 a share in 1919.

The American Plate Co. reports for 1920 $775,000 net, equal to $7.75 a share earned on $10,000,000 stock, against $1,000,000 or $10 a share in 1918, $4,857,500 in 1917, $2,500,000 in 1916 and $2,857,000 in 1915.

For 1920 the White Oil Corporation reports net income after depreciation of $1,-938,758, equivalent of $3.53 a share on 650,000 shares of no par value, with surplus of $2,638,758.

For the fifteen months ended with December last the Borden Carnival Co. of America, Inc., reports net after taxes and depreciation of $236,000, which is equal to over 47 cents on 500,000 shares of no par value stock.

Weather conditions indicate that if the year of 1920 it had 22,811 stockholders, a gain of 2,049 in 1920. Its gross earnings last year were $119,981,825, an increase of 17 per cent, over the previous year. Operating revenues of the Gas, of the year was $46,681,210, or $6,999,760 more than at the end of 1919.

MOTORS FIRST IN FORWARD MOVEMENT

Steels and Equipments Are Also Prominent in Advance; Atlantic Gulf Weak

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were strong in New York at noon, prices being not far from the morning highest. Motors were the leaders in the upturn, but steels and equipments were also prominent. Atlantic Gulf was weak, being off nearly four points at its lowest. It recovered part of the loss in the second hour.

Issues to show from two to three points gain during the morning were American Sugar, Sumatra, Woolen common, Chandler, Studebaker, General Asphalt, International Paper, Mexican Petroleum, Republic Steel and Sears Roebuck.

The market was active, first hour transaction exceeding 200,000 shares. It was another exciting market with firmer, reflecting a more hopeful feeling concerning the labor situation in England.

MIXED AT OPENING

The market began with a mixed movement and small changes, working higher or lower irregularly. This was credited to covering by board room shorts. Within thirty minutes strength prevailed, but it was not general than pronounced. Motors led the advance, with Studebaker the most conspicuous and Chandler making the largest gain. Oils were still under selling pressure at the outset, but made quick improvement. Steels were quiet but firm. Most of the early business in the group was in Crucible, which backed and filled within a large range. Rails were firm up by small fractions as a rule. Tobaccos had a better tone. Issues to show a point or more gain before the end of the first hour included General Asphalt, Famous Players, International Paper, Republic Steel, Sumatra, Central Leather, Sears-Roebuck, Pittsburgh Coal and Kansas City Southern. Weak issues up to mid-morning were Royal Dutch and Atlantic Gulf, particularly the latter.

LOWER CALL RATE

The opening call rate was 6 per cent. This was a sustaining influence. Temporarily at least the money situation is improving. There was plenty of cash available in the outside market yesterday at 5½ per cent. The ending of quarter settlement until banks are relieved of their heavy credit burdens. Before this can be accomplished must be more liquidation. It is going on steadily, being reflected to the greatest extent just now by grains. It has been severely felt in copper, lumber, cotton, rubber and many other trades. The stock market is now reflecting selling of commodities at prices which entail large losses. This is a painful but necessary part of business readjustment. Stocks are so heavily oversold that there is necessarily a time quarters and the technical situation of the market is the chief basis for the hope that prices will soon go up.

Wall Street Briefs

In March the national debt was reduced $71,080,250, and at the end of the month amounted to $23,984,108,297.

Pan Am Oil P. L. & P. Co. has been brought $502,000 by Pan American Petroleum & Transport.

It is reported from Washington that the Pennsylvania R. R. has purchased 4,000,000 in January, now numbers about 2,500,000.

Chicago, Burlington & Quincy placed $31,371 cars in March, a decrease of 37.4 per cent.

Gross for the month amounted to $1,188,200 and net to $1,324,388.

For February the Colorado & Southern reports decreases of $361,877 in gross and of $1,844,144 in net operating income. For two months decreases were respectively $720,537 and $1,138,227.

Rail Earnings

For February the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific reports decreases of $1,106,114 in gross but a gain of $48,211 in net. For two months decreases were $2,302,114 in gross and of $2,460,600 in net.

Erie road's gross increased $1,106,114 in February but it was operated at a deficit of $1,844,144 in net operating income. For two months decreases were respectively $720,537 and $1,138,227.

Which Railroads are Good and Which are Bad?

The securities of the railroads which are now in excellent shape provide a lifetime opportunity for investors, whereas the purchase of the securities of the roads which are badly crippled at this time would probably result disastrously.

Therefore, the analyses of seventy-two different railroads, which we are going to distribute to those who purchase as each analysis is compiled, should prove of inestimable value, not only to those contemplating the purchase of railroad securities, but to present stockholders as well.

The first two analyses that we may distribute cover Atchison and Baltimore & Ohio, and they will be sent free to anyone upon request, followed by the other analyses as quickly as they are issued.

Business in Ireland

Despite the fact that it is a state of war with England, Ireland is doing more business than it did before the war with Germany. According to British trade statistics, exports from Ireland to Great Britain increased from £71,758,000 in 1913 to £152,372,000 in 1918 and to £174,605,000 in 1919. Imports from Great Britain to Ireland totaled £57,135,000 in 1913, £110,864,000 in 1918 and £122,374,000 in 1919. Imports from Ireland in 1913 were £17,212 and exports, 73 per cent. of 1913 exports and 77 per cent. of 1919 exports.

Coal Output Decreasing

Bituminous coal production continues to diminish, the output for the week ended March 26 amounting to but 6,412,000 net tons, a decrease of 94,000 from the preceding week. Bituminous coal mines, it is reported by the Geological Survey, are producing but 36.4 per cent. of capacity. Anthracite production is going down also, amounting for the March 26 week to 1,544,000 gross tons, against 1,577,000 for the preceding week and 1,921,000 for the corresponding week of last year.

Depressing Rail Reports

Almost all recent reports as to rail earnings have been depressing. In February roads failed, according to the Interstate Commerce Commission, to cover all expenses and charges by $10,760,000. The increase in revenue over February, 1920, was but $17,-000,000, or about 4 per cent., with expenses 10 per cent. higher. During the first six months increased rates were in force railroads gained but $506,-000,000, or 14 per cent., in operating revenues.

Britain's Bill for Drink

Although less is being spent now in the United Kingdom for intoxicating liquors than before the war, the cost is greatly toward the old level. The drink bill of last year was an increase of more than $400,000,000 over that for the pre-war year. The amount spent on intoxicating drink in 1920 is estimated at $2,325,-000,000 as compared with $1,878,647,-000 for 1913.

Railroad Fuel Bill

The fuel bill of American railroads is enormous and one of the reasons why so many cannot pay expenses even with increased rates and present high level. In 1920 they paid out more than $1,000,000,000 for fuel alone, their coal bill amounting to $477,011,333 and their oil bill to $66,078,460. They consumed 113,127,126 tons of coal and 1,629,969,000 gallons of oil.

Gig Gain in Gold

From January 1 to March 20 this year the United States made a big gain in gold holdings, importing yellow metal to the value of $133,200,-425 and exporting but $4,349,883. For the 60 days ending March 20 the gain was $28,457,726.

Denied by Steel Corporation

Reports from Pittsburgh and Gary that it had cut wages and reduced its price for steel products were denied at the offices of the U. S. Steel Corporation in New York yesterday. It was stated that no such changes had as yet been considered.

In More Demand Abroad

This country's exports of electrical machinery and apparatus this year will approximate $150,000,000 in value, it is estimated by the National City Bank. This amount compares with less than $20,000,000 in 1914 and $101,-000,000 in 1918.

THREE AUTO SPEEDERS PAY FINES OF $5 EACH

Four men appeared in South Boston court today on charges with speeding. They were Erling Anderson, Wollaston; Arthur B. Boulton, Quincy; Wesley E. Lindsey, Somerville, all of whom were fined $5 apiece, and William H. Leary, Milton, whose case was filed.

SIEGAL HOPES TO DEFEAT LEWIS

New England Champion Busy Getting Fit for Battle at Arena

Nate Siegal has spurred on his training so as to be fit for his struggle with Ted "Kid" Lewis Friday night at the International Sporting Club show at the Boston Arena.

So great has been the improvement in Siegal that a whack at the title is owned by Jack Britton has been mentioned for him several times of late.

Siegal intends showing against Lewis, Britton's closest rival, how far advanced he is. Larry Conley has had Nate at Harvard with him, aiding in the work of instructing the students, and the New England champion has not only kept in remarkable condition, but has also imbibed many new angles of the fight game. Now he is working with his stablemate, Pal Reed, who will be on the same program with him.

The adding of the Soldier Bartfield-Tommy Robson bout to the program has increased interest in the fans. The advance sale of tickets at the office of the club at No. 28 School street, Room 16, has been brisk. Reservations may be made by calling Fort Hill 7038.

Tommy Coney of Roxbury and Johnny Brown of Newport have been signed for the eight-round bout which will open the show.

WILLIAMS NINE OFF FOR SOUTH TOMORROW

Williamstown, April 5.—The Williams baseball team departs tomorrow on its Southern trip, all games being slated before it returns to the Berkshire hills. The team opens with Georgetown at Washington Thursday with Williams and Navy for an opponent at Williamsburg Friday and a clash with the Navy booked for Saturday. Next week, Virginia, Pennsylvania and Lafayette will be tackled on the first three days, respectively.

Williams starts on its trip in fairly good shape as the unusually early arrival of Spring this year has permitted Coach Coombs to work outdoors with the squad for a couple of weeks. Seven of the Purple players saw service in the world war a few years ago. It is expected that Holmes will do the mound work in the more important games, as he is the only veteran burler making the trip. It is the first time in two years that the Williams team has gone South.

PLATT, GOLF STAR, IS TO PLAY ABROAD

Philadelphia, April 5.—J. Wood Platt, golf champion of Philadelphia, and former national semi-finalist, announced today that Harry Vardon, with a team of American amateurs who will try to lift the British golf championship.

Platt made his decision following the receipt of a letter from William C. Fownes, of Pittsburgh, who will captain the team.

INVESTIGATE KNOCKOUT OF FRANKIF QUILL

Fall River, April 5.—The knockout of Frankie Quill by Allentown Dundee in the seventh round of the main bout at the Academy A. A. show is being investigated by club officials. Reports from eyewitnesses are positively circulated that Quill was to be knocked out in speedy fashion by his opponent.

CAMBRIDGE LATIN WALLOPS B U. NINE

Cambridge Latin defeated Boston University, 5 to 3, in a practice game on the Columbus avenue playground. Many of the latter team's regular men were out.

DEL PRATT ALMOST CERTAIN TO OPEN SEASON WITH RED SOX

EX-YANKEE NOW EAGER TO PLAY

Michigan Is Expected to Release Pratt From His Present Contract

Del Pratt will be in the next Red Sox player to fall in line. It is now virtually certain that the Red Sox second baseman will be among those present when the clan of Duffy opens its league fight at Washington a week from tomorrow.

Pratt is now engaged as athletic director at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Michigan, which traded to Boston by the Yankees. Pratt at first declared he was through with baseball in the big leagues.

Handsome Harry Frazee then interviewed Pratt. He must have mentioned something about desiring to get rid of some of the money he received by the sale of Ruth, Mays, et al, for Del immediately decided that he would like to linger in the American League for at least another year.

Pratt has asked the Athletic Association at Michigan to release him from his present contract. This will probably be done. Being intelligent people, the members of Michigan's Athletic Council will realize that nothing is accomplished by making a man remain as a coach when his heart is elsewhere.

The signing of Pratt will help things materially for the Red Sox. McInnis at first, Pratt at second, Scott at short and Vitt at third will give a regular infield. And a strong infield is a mighty valuable asset to anybody's ball club, especially these hectic days.

GROUPING FOR COLLEGE RELAYS AT PENN MEET

Philadelphia, April 5.—Final grouping for the college class relay races at the University of Pennsylvania April 29 and 30 was announced here. Teams entering the National championship college races have until April 16 to decide which events they will enter. They include virtually all the big universities of the country and are not entered in the minor championships.

Grouping per college class races or minor championships are as follows:

Middle Atlantic States relay championship: Delaware, Dickinson; Lehigh, Franklin and Marshall; Haverford, Lafayette, Muhlenberg; New York University; Rutgers, Stevens; Swarthmore, Washington and Jefferson.

South Atlantic relay championship: Catholic University, Georgetown, Johns Hopkins, Maryland, Virginia, Virginia Poly Institute, George Washington University.

Central States championship: The South, West Virginia, Colgate, Pittsburgh, Notre Dame, Northwestern, Michigan Agricultural, Cornell College (Iowa).

Class 2: Carnegie Institute of Tech, Case, Rochester, Hobart, Vermont, Bowdoin, Howard, Hamline.

Class 3: Franklin and Marshall, Gettysburg, Bucknell, Muhlenberg, Wesleyan and Jefferson, The Catholic University, Manhattan, Loyola.

Class 4: Allegheny, Geneva, College City, Notre Dame, Xavier, Detroit, Georgetown, University of Florida, Villanova, Canisius.

Class 5: Drexel, LaSalle, St. Josephs, New York Law, New York Dental, New York College of Dental and Oral Surgery.

Class 6: Gallaudet, Carver, Washington, Juniata, St. Stephen's, Cheyney Training, Lincoln University.

BAIL OF INDICTED WHITE SOX REDUCED TO $7,500

Chicago, April 5.—The bond of each of the seven indicted Chicago American League club baseball players, has been reduced from $10,000 to $7,500 by Chief Justice Charles A. McDonald, of the Criminal Court. The players named were Joe Jackson, Eddie Cicotte, Claude Williams, George Weaver, Oscar Felsch, Fred McMullin and Charles Risberg.

Attorneys for the defendants, in arguing for the reduction, pointed out that the players had not disappeared when under $5,000 bonds on previous indictments. Defense counsel told the court that the bonds would be furnished with in a week. The men are not under arrest.

CHANCE TO AID SHELL SHOCK HEROES

Fans Slow in Coming Across for Purchase of New Athletic Equipment

Didn't forget about your subscription to the Baseball Fund for the shell-shock victims of the World War, did you?

According to Adjutant A. J. McNeil of the Back Bay Post, American Legion, a whole lot of you must of slipped up on it. Time is flying as rapidly as it ought to, and it'll be next Fall before the Buddies at the Roxbury Hospital for shell-shock victims, get their baseball equipment, unless some more of you unknown and unknown promptly.

A fire in the Red Cross Hut adjoining the hospital burned a whole lot of things valued by the boys, including all their athletic equipment, except one fielder's glove. Baseball is a great thing for the fellows in the shell-shock symptoms. Hut boys can't play it without the baseball or the gloves or the bats and things. Back Bay Post found it out, and started a fund, naming A. J. McNeil as treasurer, and it's open to all comers—the faster the quicker.

Sauce and Sass

By CHARLES E. PARKER

'TWAS EVER THUS.

Gadzooks! The rooks are with us now, from Hicksville and Slowtown,
A strapping, whacking bunch of boys, just c'aring for renown;
They rock the rock o'er fence or wall and run the bases quick,
The curves they serve from pitching mound are durn confounded slick;
We hear they spear long, screeching drives with bare hand or with glove,
That Cobb's a slob compared with them, and Spoke's an awful dubb;
And yet we fraj not o'er these tales that come up from the camps.
We ken such men as Tris and Ty will make them look like trumps—
Forsooth, that Ruth can shoot them one, or two, or twenty cricks,
Or more, before they flyver out and drift back to the sticks.

Can you imagine an Olympic track meet in which were entered the star athletes of twenty-seven nations, with the events continuing every day for nearly two weeks, drawing a total paid attendance of less than 30,000? If you attended the recent Olympic games at Antwerp you wouldn't have to imagine it, and if your imagination isn't working well, you have but to scan the attendance figures given in official report of the Belgian Olympic committee.

More persons attended the one-day Olympic tryouts at the Harvard Stadium last July than paid there way into the Antwerp Stadium during the two weeks' course of the track games.

Jack Slattery, the Crimson baseball mentor, believes the Braves are going to make a real showing this season.

"Of course," says Jack, "I'm not predicting a pennant for them, although I would not be surprised to see them lead their league for the first month or two of the season. Class and experience begins to tell during the second month, but the youthfulness and enthusiasm of Mitchell's club should carry it along in great style for the first half of the year, and may give it a winning margin which will keep it in the first division for some time afterwards.

He said he liked to read this col;
We thought he was a clever pol
'Round looking for some suckers to the fight;
He parked himself upon our desk—
A figure very picturesque—
Prepared, it seemed, to stay there for the night;
He hemmed and hawed a little while,
And then he cracked that grafting smile,
Then clearly proved our first guess had been right.

Discrepancies as to the advantage over his opponents held by Charley Paddock when he was clocked in 20 4-5 seconds for the furlong dash, a week or so ago, serve to further confuse Eastern experts in estimating the real merit of performances. One report had him leading Hutchens, of the University of California, by only one yard, while another declared the Pasadena star broke the tape fully five yards ahead of his closest rival. Inasmuch as Hutchinson is an unknown quantity here and has never been reported as having threatened records, a one-yard or a foot margin over him would not convince Easterners that Paddock earned the time credited to him. A five-yard lead, however, would prove a strong argument in Paddock's favor.

Middleweight Champion Johnny Wilson has a strong booster in Bob Edgren, one of the leading ficticff authorities in the country. In a recent article Bob maintains that those who claimed Johnny struck foul blows, gauged their decisions on the position of Johnny's elbow and not his fist. All such blows, according to Edgren, were uppercuts to the stomach with the glove striking fair territory. Edgren pays high tribute to Wilson's gameness and judgment, and, although he states Johnny is not a Tommy Ryan or a Stanley Ketchel, he believes he will retain his title for some time to come.

McINTIRE SUBSTITUTES AND WINS SALEM BOUT

Eddie McIntire of Bangor, Me., substituted for Patsy De Lucca of Boston and defeated K. O. Miller of Boston in the ten-round main bout at the Naville A. C., Salem. Miller was dropped to the floor twice in the first round. Johnny Brown of Newport beat Conny Pierce of Hartford in ten rounds; Willie Nelson of Lynn won from A. Laveau of Salem in eight rounds, and Young George of Lynn scored a technical knockout over Cedric Kreault of Salem in the fourth round.

ADAIR LOW SCORER IN PINEHURST GOLF PLAY

Pinehurst, N. C., April 5.—Perry Adair of Atlanta led the field of amateurs competing for the North and South golf championship with a card of 73 at the end of the first eighteen holes. He played on No. 2 course. Gardiner White, with a card of 74, was the low scorer on the No. 2 course.

MITCHELL SAYS GIANTS LOOK LIKE WINNERS

Braves' Leader Picks Brooklyn to Finish in Second Place

BY NICK FLATLEY.

Somewhere in Dixie, April 5.—Between spells of telling young pitchers how to keep the runners close to first and learning when the bid two no trumps, we induced Manager Mitchell of the Braves to give us his ideas on the strength of the teams in the National League.

The manager of the tribe adults that the New York Giants look like the class of the league. He points out where Mcgraw has a lot of pitching, a good infield and a fair outfield even if Rapp fails to come up to the mark, passable catchers and a good outfield.

Mitch admits that the sickness of Ross Youngs may affect the Giants at the start. He isn't inclined to believe that Shortstop Davy will be out of the game for more than a week, though. If McGraw can get his regular lineup together for the start, states Mitchell, he will be a hard club to nose out. He has enough pitching to carry along a well balanced outfit. Also Brooklyn, too, will be right back in the class of the contenders.

The rest of it looks like a toss-up according to Fred. He says Pittsburgh and Cincinnati have very strong possibilities. The Pirates with Rabbit at short are a dangerous team, but to my mind they haven't quite enough punch to come through. Cincinnati will be formidable when the holdouts all get in shape, and I haven't any doubt they'll be on the job when the campaign opens. The Braves are an unknown quantity, but if a few of the young pitchers come up to the Spring promise they'll surprise and block down a few cheaty teams."

Mitch expects to beat out the Cubs and the Phillies anyhow with his own club, so, of course, isn't willing to pick any of the weakness in what appears to be lowliest of his enemies.

WITH THE SCHOOLBOYS

BY FRED A. LANE.

At Brighton High, Coach Tom Scanlon has the boys working out daily. Bill McKenney, one of the few veterans, is pitching again this season and is sure burning them over for so early in the season.

* * *

Catch Bill Higgins of Watertown High reports having nine pitchers and four catchers striving for battery positions. Shanahan, a southpaw, looks like the goods, and with Chamberlain working behind the bat a fine combination results.

The idea of having "play teachers" in the Boston public high schools is one that is sure to meet with the best of results. For the day that last among enough to make the first squad in the many sports taken up by the school faculty this gives him an excellent chance to develop. Under such a system many boy who has ambition although lacking in the necessary physical qualifications of possessing little natural ability may be rapidly developed and in so doing come along sufficiently to make one of first team.

* * *

For the baseball season the boys will be outfitted with balls and gloves. The four men that have been named for the positions as "play teachers" are capable all being former athletes who understand the work thoroughly. Harry McLain has been named for Commerce High, Paul Benson for English High, T. Staples will have charge of Dorchester while Frank Horgan will look after Mechanic Arts High's interests.

* * *

Coach McLoughlin of Somerville will be called upon to train his heavyset guns on Cambridge Latin next Saturday, for it will be only through a victory over Coach McDonald's team that his ambitions for another Suburban League championship can be realized.

* * *

Captain Tim Dempsey, who is covering second base for Malden, is a hard worker both on and off the field. It is this sort of men that coaches desire to lead their teams. And in the game with Saugus he proved to the fans that he can suck the old pill hard and true. Alertness on the part of Saugus outfielders cut off many a good hit on this hustler.

* * *

Jack McDonald, who coaches Malden High, has his work cut out for him making a ball team from the material that is now on hand. There was little chance to see just what they could do in the field June, although Saugus by their result practice game, the boys from that suburb failing to hit the ball when the first team was on the field.

* * *

The work of Brookline High in its practices of the past three weeks bear out Coach Henry Carroll working overtime to put sufficient "pep" into the team for a good showing next Saturday with Medford. With the help of Mitchell, Corcoran, Briggs, Leonard, Chase and Casson, all veterans of last year, it is hoped that the team will be bolstered up sufficiently enough to make a good showing in the coming fight.

ALABAMA NINE IS HARD TEAM TO DEFEAT

Braves Have No Cinch With College Boys; Hard to Select Pitchers

By NICK FLATLEY.

University of Alabama, Ala., April 5.—The regular Braves engaged the University of Alabama here, while the scrubs had a real vacation for themselves. The varsity didn't have any real cinch outlined, as they have a habit of turning out pretty good ball clubs at the local institution for which the snappy, old fashioned game is named.

It was at Alabama that Darrill Pratt, who played all last Winter for the Red Sox, and Joe Sewell, the sensational little Cleveland shortstop, got their first touch of real baseball. Young Stevenson, who plays the infield here, was generally regarded as a better college player than the little Indian, and has agreed to join the Tris Speakers in June.

He trained a bit with the champs, will be all ready to step in if his classmate, or any other of the regular infielders meets with injury.

The rookie pitchers will get most of the work this week, their final tryout session. Mitchell shot four of them into the fray between the divided Braves at Brewton, and didn't get much extra. Anywhere except at the quarter all looked pretty good.

Pierrotti and Cooney worked against the varsity, while Johnson and Braxton flung for the substitutes. The first named, who didn't get into these very much, has hopped right into the picture recently and seems pretty certain of plucking off a regular job.

192 CANDIDATES FOR HARVARD TRACK TEAM

One hundred and ninety-two candidates have reported for the Harvard track team, and are now engaged in strenuous preparation for the Spring games meets, the first one of which comes with Penn State, two weeks from today. Coach Bill Hingham and Dr. Darrie Parmenter are looking after the candidates. Among the football players out for the track team are Jim Tolbert, captain of the shot putting squad, and Rake Bloss, in charge of the hammer throwers. Among the pupils are Ben Lockwood and Jack Crocker.

DAN HOWLEY'S BROTHER SUCCUMBS TO ILLNESS

J. Walter Howley, thirty-nine years old, of No. 6 Evans road, North Weymouth, died at the Quincy Hospital hospital. He was the branch manager in the Providence office of the Liberty Mutual Insurance company, and was formerly superintendent of the Weymouth division of the South Shore Railway.

Efforts are being made to notify his brother Dan, who is assistant manager of the Detroit National League club and who is somewhere in the South. The dead man leaves a widow and one child.

BOGASH CLASHES WITH THE KAYO KING

New York, April 5.—Louis Bogash, the Bronx heavyweight, will meet his most dangerous foe when he faces Jimmy O'Hatty this evening in the Broadway Sporting Club. Athletes Who Have Scored in Business

JAMES B. CONNOLLY.

James B. Connolly, author of "Out of Gloucester," "Deep Sea's Toll," "Head Winds," "Seine Boat Hunters," "Hither Joy" and many other books, mainly stories of the sea, and a prolific magazine articles too numerous for mention, was before he reformed, or, better, changed over, a track athlete of prominence.

Jimmy gained international fame as a member of the first American Olympic team, which swept all before it at Athens in 1896. At that meeting he won the hop skip and jump, or, as it was called in those day, the triple leap and finished second in the high jump and third in the broad jump to other American competitors. All this happened twenty-five years ago almost to the day.

Connolly held the hop, skip and jump championship for eleven years, from 1896 until 1907. Connolly was one of the press representatives to take the voyage around the world with the American fleet some fifteen years ago and was a correspondent in the Spring games, the first one of which comes with Penn State, two weeks from today. Coach Bill Hingham and Dr. Darrie Parmenter are looking after the candidates. Among the football players out for the track team are Jim Tolbert, captain of the shot putting squad, and Rake Bloss, in charge of the hammer throwers. Among the pupils are Ben Lockwood and Jack Crocker.

PESAK FLOPPED BY STRANGLER LEWIS

Champion Uses Bar and Hammer Lock to Retain Title in New York Bout

New York, April 5.—The "Strangler" Lewis, leaving his famous headlock in mothballs, retained the heavyweight championship of the world tonight, pinning John Pesak of Nebraska with a bar and hammer hold in the thirty-four minutes and thirty-two seconds.

Pesak carried the attack to the champion throughout the earlier part of the match and once or twice came very near to pinning the champion's shoulders to the mat. Several times Lewis escaped Pesak's holds only by rolling off the mat into the press box.

FRIEDMAN BEATS PHILADELPHIA BATTLER

New England Bantam Champion Victor Over Williamson in Ten Rounds

Abe Friedman, New England bantamweight champion, successfull defended his title at the Carlyle A. C. by defeating Max Williamson of Philadelphia in ten rounds of fast milling.

The battle was Friedman's from the start, but once during the melee did the Philadelphian show any signs of the boxing skill which, in the past, has caused trouble for so many star bantams.

In the semi-final Frank Tillo of the North End and Jack Thomas of Canada fought ten rugged rounds. The decision in favor of the local boy, however, did not make a bit with the fans.

In the first ten-rounder, Al Soare of East Boston gamely took the blows administered by Battling Downey of Roxbury and won the award.

STECKER IS NOT TO MEET OLE JACOBSON

Wrestling fans will not be able to see Joe Stecker and Ole Jacobsen in action at the Grand Opera House Thursday night, as Stecker has cancelled all New England dates arranged for the current week, including Boston. Joe's reason is that he has several important matches ahead and he will want all the time possible in which to train especially for these events.

While there were several stars who stood ready to fill the date here, Promoter Toohey said that he would rather call everybody off than to offer any substitute for a man of Stecker's class.

APOLLO A. A. TO STAGE AMATEUR GLOVE BOUTS

Herman and Snyder to Battle at Worcester

By JACK CONWAY.

Pete Herman back from England after knocking out Jimmy Wilde, is one of the most active fighters in this country right now. At Worcester Thursday night the former boss of the bantamweight division will have Kenny Snyder of Roxbury as an opponent. Herman will then take a few days' rest, after which he will begin training for his ten-session affair with Young Montreal at the Arena on April 15 under the direction of the Armory A. A.

Snyder is very liable to hand Herman a surprise. The Roxbury youth is a mighty classy boxer when he is right. And just now Snyder is traveling at a flashy pace, as he has won a couple of winning battles in New York rings.

* * *

Louis Lynch, East Boston lightweight, has joined forces with Herby Meyers of Charlestown. This means that Lynch will be handled properly and will soon be on record with the blue-ribbon steppers. Meyers knows the boxing game thoroughly, and also is not that type of manager who tries to bring a youngster along too fast for an in a hurry. Therefore Lynch will be matched carefully and will not be pitted against the star men of his class until he is good enough schooled to give them an even crusade. There are hundreds of promising boxers ruined each year by greedy managers who overmatch their protegee.

* * *

Tony Palascio, who saw the Britton-Lewis bout in New York, is picking Nate Siegal to defeat Lewis at the International Sporting Club's show at the new Boston Arena Friday night. Tony considers Siegal a much better fighter than most of the fans give him credit for being. He is of the opinion that Jack Britton is the only welterweight who can conquer the New England champion.

It is interesting when a manager of a boxer gives credit to his man's opponent. Here is what Eddie Meade, manager of Andy Chaney, has to say about Johnny Murray of New York who clashes with Al Shubert, New England featherweight champion, in a ten-round bout at the Commonwealth A. A. Saturday night:

"When Johnny Murray fought Chaney in New York, my candidate for the featherweight championship was mighty lucky he wasn't knocked out. Early in the bout, Murray caught Chaney flush on the jaw with a right hand punch. Andy flopped to the canvas and was still conversing with the bluebirds at the count of eight. He then managed to struggle to his feet and was mighty lucky to last the round."

Murray is no chance puncher as he knocked Johnny Kilbane down twice in a bout at Cleveland. The little New Yorker now says he will stop Shubert.

Baer Says Gink Fowler Dove Like a Goldfish

By "BUGS" BAER.

Sir—I am all unhinged at your continued boosting of Gink Fowler, the man with the oleomargarine courage. Battling Bozo knocked him for a trip. Bozo bounced Gink to the floor so often that the sawdust stuck to his pink like a waiter's plaid. Gink is a wealthy business man of Debris, Okla. He made a million eelcoasting patches on postage stamps. Sincerely yours, STAN ADLEN.
Hyde Square, Jamaica Plain.

The world will little know nor care long what transpires in this vale of shadow boxing and merry laughter. The champion of Roughtown's courage has been tampered with so often that now he pulls his neck in every time he spots the ash wagon. It was only last Saturday night that Bill Halligan and Jack McGowan claimed that their man, Narrowback Spirgin, laced Gink like a shoe. It might have been worse. Narrowback might have laced him like a corset.

Looking at the records in an absolutely unfair and biased manner, we know that Narrowback had over age. That guy would sing to Caruso. He had the courage of a Texas river, all sand and no water.

Gink took one loose-leaf fan at Narrowback, and the boy with the razor-edged nose carved out a missionary work in Utica. Gink was fast crumbling in the audience how to tell the difference between boxlegging Scotch and rye. Gink was saying that if you take one cocktail and then fall on your face, it is Scotch. He was illustrating the effects of rye and had just torn off seven pesos plastique on the canvas when he piped Narrowback fearfracking it out through the exit.

Narrowback never returned to Roughtown to claim his downed title. His exodus left a vacancy in the municipal hall that can never be filled. Gink wasn't discouraged by this Von Kluck victory, but immediately inaugurated a training camp to prepare for his only real opponent. The Glutt.

That was a man for your reformed life. With an intelligence as beautiful as an elephant's trunk, four work like a mighty oak and a punch like a gut of Niagara water. The Glutt!

The Glutt used to train with a cigar store Indian before the commission compelled the lumber cornflower.

Mohawks to carry a handful of strychnine hahagony perfector. Another specialty Gink used. The Glutt is that he always insisted on absolute darkness when he did his shadow boxing. He threw the richest shadow in the world.

When the Glutt twirled a fastball of knuckles at an opponent that was fell like they dopped for the wooden nickel. He was very particular about used to break chocolate eclairs in two cently. He was a real chivalrous gentleman. He was always heard to exclaim that a woman was entitled to the first in the subway if she got there first.

His fought into thousand battles to finally wind up and was awarded the 1872 Nobel Peace prize for his efforts in behalf of Ireland. But he was no match for Gink Fowler. When they faced each other in their memorable contest, Gink's toughness of his knees started to twitter. Now, twittering knees are not a badge of cowardice in Roughtown. The highest tribute that we can pay a man is to excel him for bravery when his Adam's apple is running up and down the chromatic scale of fear.

Gink was a fearless intrepid man. He was courageous. Roughtown awarded him the highest municipal citation that any town can give a man for courage. And that was a marriage certificate.

Strange Romance of the Beautiful Daughter of a New York Millionaire

This amazing mystery is founded on a story by F. Britten Austin, which has been made into a wonderful picture drama by Cosmopolitan Productions, under the direction of George D. Baker, starring Marion Davies, the famous screen beauty.

THE INTRODUCTION

Pauline Vandermeulen is the beautiful daughter of William Vandermeulen, a New York millionaire, who, because of his iron-handed methods, is called "the Pirate of Wall Street." She has a will of her own—from her father—but she has inherited a kind heart and generous nature from her mother.

In her teens she had trance-like spells in which she saw herself as living in earlier ages; ones she surprised her father by telling him she had seen him as a genuine pirate in buccaneer times. Her brother, Geoffrey, between whom and herself there is a mutually deep affection, goes to war, and while he is away Pauline grows to maturity.

He becomes greatly attached to his "buddy," Dr. John Grant, a young army surgeon, and through Geoffrey's letters home Pauline becomes keenly interested in the young surgeon, and is eager to meet him upon his return from France with Geoffrey.

By Jane McLean

CHAPTER II.

ARMISTICE DAY found the whole family tearful and joyful. Even Mr. Vandermeulen gave way and showed that after all he was human.

After a strenuous day Mrs. Vandermeulen with hope in her eyes confided to Pauline that perhaps the millennium had arrived. To her it was providential that Geoffrey had been spared, but almost more of a marvel that William had for the first time in fifteen years kissed her good night after the manner of their early companionship.

Pauline was nearing nineteen now—she was old enough to say nothing—as she well knew that her money-mad father needed only a few hours to revert to his autocratic ways.

She had had evidence of his masterful will for a long time; and in most matters she had smiled and let him have his way, but during the past year he had been intruding on what she considered her very own private domains, namely, her heart.

Mr. Vandermeulen, like many a man of his type, had set money up on a pedestal and worshipped the god of mammon. Money was the wherewithal to purchase whatever the heart desired. With it he had bought a magnificent estate, rare furnishings, artistic statuaries—with it he had laid out beautiful gardens and conservatories; had acquired a splendid yacht—loaned to the government during the war—with it he had done everything he could think of to make—and had not bought a husband for Pauline.

A Practical Man

If Mr. Vandermeulen had put his thoughts into words they would have read something like this: "Why shouldn't I endow Pauline with a title? She would make a beautiful duchess—and second would become her very well—I could take one of those old run-down estates and make a good thing of it—theoretically, there's nothing a man can't do with money."

It was Henri Marie Josef Duc de Chavannes who put the idea into the versatile brain of the financier. The duke was a traveling French dollar-a-year man, that is to say, he was for the United States to supervise the making of munitions for his government, and it was in connection with his work he called on Mr. Vandermeulen.

He was not bad looking as dukes go; moreover, he was a gentleman, and he had the delightful French manner which flatters every woman into thinking she is the only woman in the world and every man into thinking he is the most important. The duke pleased Mr. Vandermeulen, but before he allowed himself to be carried away by appearances he took his usual business precautions to have him looked up.

Shortly before the armistice he had discovered that Chavannes was the impoverished owner of three chateaus, two of which had housed the Grand Monarque, and one of which had been a favorite stopping place of Masarin and Anne of Austria.

Having learned all these things, Mr. Vandermeulen asked the duke, quite casually, if he would run out to Larchmont to dinner, strictly on families, and the duke, who knew a millionaire when he saw one, accepted with just the proper hesitancy.

Whereupon the host called up his wife and told her that it might be well for Pauline to break her usual rule of ignoring evening dress and attire herself in all her glory to receive the Duke de Chavannes that evening at dinner.

A Good Impression

"Nothing of the sort," said Pauline, after her mother had transmitted these instructions; "why should I dress up for a duke? If he were the right kind of a duke he'd be fighting for his country—no, I shall wear what I always wear."

"But your father, my dear—your father has ordered——"

"Poor father," answered Pauline.

When the "Pirate of Wall street" ushered his guest into the big gun-room he was mightily surprised to observe that his daughter wore the simplest sort of a simple gown. Finding it impossible to storm in front of nobility, he contented himself with a strange glance at his wife the while he was introducing the newcomer.

"And I," said Pauline, "am Miss Vandermeulen."

"Ah!" said the duke, "it is a compliment to myself to be allowed to meet you and your mother."

"It isn't necessary to say that during the war we're not dressing up," said Pauline; "you'll have to take us as you find us."

The duke sat next to Pauline at dinner and his earnest conversation gave her father a chance to observe with secret satisfaction that he was making a good impression.

Indeed, Pauline seemed to regard him in the light of an old acquaintance, she said as much while they lingered over their coffee.

"I seem to have met you before, but of course that's impossible."

"In a dream, possibly," said her father; he returned joyously to his guest. "My little girl here has a way of seeing people in a past existence—don't know what you call it, second sight or something of the sort—now, for instance, she's seen me as a pirate with a bloody crew sweeping the Spanish Main and making weeping ladies walk the plank."

"Ah!" The duke was politely interested; "You believe in reincarnation, mademoiselle—I see—and in what guise did I appear to you in the days of the Great Armada?"

"That's what I am trying to figure out," declared the girl, smiling at him. "You're just a figure at present, you know, sort of hazy. One of these times I'll get a better glimpse and reveal the secret. But I'm sure you were a most laudable person."

"According to the standard of the times, probably," answered Chavannes. "Of course, one can't be held responsible for one's acts in a previous existence!"

"I'll admit we got his hands full taking care of this one," Vandermeulen broke in. "Imagine me as a pirate."

"Yes, ma'am," his wife assured him, but the Duke was too polite to dissent.

They wandered through the sumptuous rooms and Vandermeulen whisked his wife outside.

"I'ma chap, that!" he said, lighting a cigar.

"I suppose he is," said Mrs. Vandermeulen hastily.

"Suppose he is," thundered her husband, "he is; there's no supposing about it—and his title—it's real, none of these sheddy affairs with gilt instead of the real thing—no, ma'am, Chavannes' got the goods, straight line from the Crusades down—that's going some, I'll say."

"He ought to marry a girl with a lineage as old as his own," ventured Mrs. Vandermeulen.

Her Husband Disagrees

"Nothing of the sort—that's where you're wrong, Anna—he ought to marry an American girl and put a little up-to-date blood into the blooming aristocracy. The trouble with these old families is that they don't keep their stock up to par"—he paused and laughed—"rather good, eh?—I'll say it is. Well, how'd you like to see Pauline a duchess, eh? Pretty fine, I'd call it."

"My dear William," cried his wife, "I think Pauline will marry whom she likes and I don't think we'll have anything to say about it."

"Oh, you don't; let me tell you I shall have something to say about it—I am paying her bills—I am bringing her up—I am furnishing her with an education, and in return she'll do just what I think's best by her."

The Pirate of Wall Street decided to try the well-known recipe which recommends propinquity as the aid to love. The Duke became a frequent visitor to Larchmont and whenever he came Mr. Vandermeulen developed a sudden fondness for his wife's company.

Pauline smiled to herself; she had no idea of being courted under such unromantic conditions. Neither had she the remotest desire to become a duchess, and as for the various chateaus and their historic associations, she preferred something nearer home.

In this fashion affairs drifted along until the end of the war sounded the call for peace and the return of the boys in khaki. Geoffrey had written that he was bringing his buddie home with him. He grew enthusiastic over the accomplishments of Dr. John Grant in his letter to his mother, who read it aloud after dinner.

Mr. Vandermeulen listened in silence; he saw trouble ahead; also he saw Pauline's eyes shining with admiration.

If Dr. John Grant turned out to be as attractive as Geoffrey made out he would make some excuse to hasten him on his homeward way, and if he didn't, no harm would be done.

Chavannes a Guest

Chavannes was a guest the evening the two young men, freed from camp, arrived at the Vandermeulen home. And after the first effusive greetings, in which Mrs. Vandermeulen kissed the doctor in her excitement and Mr. Vandermeulen registered the fear that the young man was too good looking to have around, the women folk settled back in the role of admiring listeners to anecdotes without end.

Dr. John Grant let his friend do the talking and kept his eyes focused on Pauline. His chum slapped him on the back when they went to Geoffrey's pre-war apartments. "Well, did I exaggerate? Pauline's a peach, isn't she?"

And Dr. Grant nodded as though words were useless, because too weak to express proper acquiescence.

Geoffrey's eyes twinkled; it was a real pleasure to find his cognisums on Pauline had lived up to their glowing promise. He did not go to bed before hunting up his sister.

"Hello, kid! Well, how do you like Johnnie?"

"He seems to be a very nice young man," answered Pauline.

"Yes, doesn't he? Perfect little gentleman. Too bad he can't stay."

"He's not going?" The question was wrung from the girl.

"Ah," Geoffrey seized her arms, "he's all I said he was, isn't he?" and he departed laughing. Pauline stared after him, but her face showed no resentment at this brotherly manoeuvre to get her real opinion of the doctor.

Tragedy of the Sea Where Heroine's Spirit Lived in Buccaneer Days

"FOR LOVE"

"WHERE'S Eva?" he asked abruptly.

"Where's Eva?" he asked me to excuse her. I have sent something to her room."

Philip scowled.

"She was all right when Calligan left," he said. There was a rough, unformed suspicion in his mind; he moved towards the table. "You don't mind if I sit down as I am?"

"My dear, of course not."

There was a little silence; then she said:

"Philip, do you remember the night you told us that you were going to be married?"

"Yes."

"Do you remember that I wanted you to break off your engagement? That I begged you—"

Philip interrupted:

"Mother—please stop. What's the use of going back to all that? I don't want to hear anything about it, I——" He broke off as the servant re-entered.

He made a pretense of eating the dinner served to him; as soon as he could he rose to leave the room. Mrs. Winterdick followed him.

"Once upon a time you used to tell me all your troubles, Phil," she said sadly.

Bit His Lip

He bit a lip; the arm beneath hers suddenly stiffened; then he bent and kissed her lightly.

"I should tell you now, mother mine—if I had any troubles."

"You mean that you are—quite, quite happy?" she asked, slowly.

"Of course! At least—" He released himself from her roughly. "Happy! It all depends what you mean by that! I suppose I'm as happy as I deserve to be." He walked away a step and came back, looking down at her sad face fondly. "What brick wall are you up against now?" he asked, whimsically.

She put her arms round his neck, holding him so that he could not move; she spoke earnestly into his unhappy face.

"Phil—why won't you tell me the truth?" she said, pitifully.

"Look here," he said, suddenly. "We thought we were clever, didn't we? We thought—you and I and the guv-nor—that we'd fixed things up so that nobody except ourselves and old Dennison would ever know about the . . . the bargain! . . . Well—" He passed a hand over his eyes. "She knows—too," he said.

"Eva!" There was a tone of sharp distress in Mrs. Winterdick's voice. "Oh, no, Phil! Oh, I hope not."

"Well, she does—she knew all along, and was just playing up to us. . . . It's just been a case of 'When Greek meets Greek . . .' He drew a long breath. "So you see, the laugh isn't all on our side, after all."

There was a long silence; Philip walked away to the window and stood staring out into the gathering darkness.

"Well," he said then, "haven't you anything to say? What are you thinking?"

"I'm thinking," Mrs. Winterdick said slowly, "how terrible it must all be—for her!"

He wheeled slowly round.

"For her?" Somehow it had never struck him in this light before; his thoughts and pity had hitherto been chiefly for himself.

"Why for her?" he asked again harshly. "She's all right—she knew what she was doing. • • after all——" He laughed mirthlessly.

"She's younger than you, Phil; she's little more than a child, and an unsophisticated child at that. Until they came to live she'd never been about or seen anything of the world. If I'm true that she married you, knowing what you say she did, I can only pity her; I can't blame her. Poor child! She didn't know what she was throwing away—she didn't realize that some day she might meet a man whom she would care for. • • " Her voice quivered and she stopped a moment, only to go on brokenly, "Oh, Phil, I always thought that she did love you! I haven't seen you together a great deal, but I watched her, and I was sure she cared—so sure! It's the one happy thing to think that she did. I tried to think that in time you would get to love her, too, and then. • • •

Phil laughed dryly.

"Don't you worry yourself, my dear," he said more quietly. "We shall shake down somehow right, shouldn't be surprised if we're not pointed at all round the country before long as being a model couple."

And then—because he felt so utterly wretched that he hardly knew how to bear himself—he walked out of the room, whistling as if he had not a care in the world, and shut the door behind him.

Front Door Open

The front door stood open to the dusky night, and remembering that he had left the car standing in the drive, Phil went out to take it round to the garage.

As he was leaving the yard he heard the sound of voices, followed by a laugh.

He hesitated and listened; then he turned. From an open stable on the right a light shown out, a long yellow shaft in the darkness, and by that light he could see his wife, with her arm round the satiny neck of one of his father's horses, talking to it gravely.

She made a pretty picture standing there, bareheaded, and with the inefficient light shining all about her. Philip caught the gleam of a diamond on the hand that caressed the horse's neck and heard her voice distinctly. He stood outside, uncertain what to do.

"We used to keep horses at home, you know, Williams—no, I don't mean in this town—this never really seems home to me, somehow! We only have cars here—and I'm not very fond of motoring. But at home—our real home, I mean, before we got rich—we had an old brown cob. Dandy his name was, and he used to come when I called him, and——" She broke off. Philip had moved forward and was standing in the doorway.

Eva's arm slipped down from the horse's neck and she fell back a step.

Williams hurriedly grabbed up the harness he was cleaning and bolted. There was a moment of silence.

"I thought you had a headache," Philip said. "My mother told me that you were in bed with a headache."

"I wasn't in bed, my head ached, and I didn't want any dinner, that was all."

Eyes Suspicious

His eyes sought hers suspiciously, but she stood with her back to the light, and her face was in shadow.

"Do you often come here and make a confidant of Williams?" Philip asked then.

There was a sneer in his voice, but it was not intended; he was holding himself in a grip of iron, and his heart was burning with jealousy even of his own groom, a slip of a lad with a freckled face and slow tongue, with whom this girl preferred to talk.

She answered him quite calmly, though she had flushed a little at his tone.

"I do sometimes . . . He loves horses, and so do I."

"You mean that I don't . . ."

"I have heard you say a great many times that you prefer a car." She moved past him to the door. She was quite mistress of herself; she walked quietly, and naturally; she hummed a little snatch of song under her breath as she went.

The little sound of indifference and composure maddened young Winterdick; his hands were clenched into fists as he followed her.

"Mr. Calligan has gone, I suppose?" she asked casually.

She half looked over her shoulder as she spoke, and for the first time Philip could see her face distinctly in the yellow light from the stable, and he saw that her eyes were red and swollen with crying. The little unformed suspicion that had stirred in his heart many times of late woke again. The smoldering fire burst into a flame as he caught her arm in a rough grasp.

My husband gets my goat by chewing gum. He swore off smoking about a year ago and since then he has chewed incessantly. He wears his gum to church inside his face, and all during the sermon he chews it on the side next to me. At the movies I get a rest from seeing him chew, but the "spink-spank" of the gum breaks in on the most touching scenes. Beds of gum are strewn from one end of the house to the other. The telephone, window-sills, piano and mirrors are decorated with gum. I spend all my spare time burning up gum and scraping it off of things. Mrs. Solomon Says—

BY HELEN ROWLAND

BEHOLD, the sages have arisen, saying:

"Go to, go to! At last we have discovered the CAUSE of Woman's capriciousness, and of her nerves, and of her temperament, and her tantrums. Verily, verily, it is TIGHT SHOES! And all an husbands' sorrows and sufferings proceed from his wife's aching FEET!"

• • •

Hola, hola, hola! For a man's grouches there is always "a reason." Yea, it is his wife's cooking, or her nagging, or her mother, or her follies.

But for a WOMAN'S grouches no man hath ever discovered the real reason.

He keepeth her awake half the night, while he puttereth about the house, and eateth midnight suppers from the icebox. His disturbeth her slumbers with his snoring. Yet he is amazed that she doth not arise blithely singing as the lark in the morning. And he cannot understand her "fretfulness" at breakfast.

He scattereth his garments and his newspapers about the house, and casteth his ashes anywhere save in the ashtray, and his cigar stubs into the jardinieres. Yet is he astonished that she "maketh such a labor" of the housework, and is forever "tussling around" with a dustpan.

She "getteth on his nerves"!

He delayeth ALWAYS until the last moment, and is never ready to depart on time. Yet doth it try his soul that she keepeth a clock-watch on him, and is distracted concerning the catching of trains.

She driveth him to madness!

He forgetteth everything, from a promise to her birthday. He leaveth his money and his hatchery in his "other clothes." He arriveth at the playhouse and cannot find his tickets.

Yet doth he chide his wife because she keepeth her mind forever upon "little things," and implore her "for the love of Mike" to abjure the "worry habit."

She beseth him to tears with her pettiness.

He gaseth at the pretty damsel in the abbreviated skirt and the gray silk stockings, and forgetteth to admire his wife's new hat.

Yet is he dumfounded at the jealousy of women; and their "suspicion" and peevishness are beyond his understanding.

Therefore, doth he nod with understanding and with delight, when the preachers and the doctors and the sages and the scientists discover a NEW cause for woman's inconsistency.

Verily, verily, in my heart I wonder HOW the philosophers and the wise men will continue to live, when they have discovered ALL the reasons "why a woman doth things"!

For when they have blamed her "temperamentalism" upon her hats and her shoes, and her corsets, and her diet, and her powder, and her rouge, and her nerves, she will still continue to mystify and to torment them.

And not one among them all will ever perceive that the REAL cause of woman's capriciousness is MAN!

For, of alibis and the making of alibis, there is no end!

CHAPTER LXXIV.

Copyright, 1921, Star Company.

WHEN Miss Theodora Dale accepted Peter Throckmorton, he asked her a blunt question.

"Darling, why have you kept me waiting so long? Is it because you were not sure that you loved me?"

"Goose!" the girl laughed up into his face. "I have loved you for such a long time that I hardly remember when it began."

The pair were alone in the somber parlor of the house in which Theo lived.

It was Sunday afternoon and the other boarders were either taking naps or had gone out into the golden sunshine. Madame LeGrand was upstairs in her own little sitting room, reading. She appreciated that it was a rare adventure a chaperone was best out of sight.

"Then why have you refused to marry me until now?" the man insisted.

Theo flushed hotly, but met his gaze squarely.

"Because I wanted to try to learn to be more like your people," she confessed. "I have been reading some books your sister told me about."

Close-Mouthed Pair

"My sister!" Peter echoed in amazement.

"Yes," Theo nodded. "She and I have gotten to be very good friends. Often after the show in the afternoon she has met me and we have had tea together in some quiet joint—I mean tearoom—and we've got awfully well acquainted. I just love her, Pete!"

"Well, you two are a close-mouthed pair!" the man declared when he had listened to Theo's story. "And yet—I do not see what all that has to do with your not getting married to me until now."

"Because," Theo explained, "I did not want to accept you, or go to your home and talk to your mother—until I could talk well enough not to have her disappointed in the girl you had picked out."

That Sophia Throckmorton was not disappointed when she met her son's betrothed was evident. She had written to her as soon as Peter told her of his engagement, asking that she come up to supper next Sunday evening.

Should Ignore It

"Oh, no, dear—not now," Mary Peter said gratefully to his sister. "But for you, Mother would have expressed some objection to the 'chorus girl' business."

"Oh, no, dear—now now," Mary protested. "Like the rest of us, Mother has learned a lot. She sees that it is the person doing the job—not the job itself—that matters."

Mary did not tell her brother that it had taken a good deal of argument on her part to bring her parent to the point of forgetting that Theo Dale danced and sang silly songs in a popular "musical show."

"When she is restored to Peter that will all be in the past," Mary reasoned. "So let's ignore it now."

This Sophia Throckmorton at last consented to do. Theo's gentleness, and sweet, deferential manner to herself rendered this comparatively easy.

"I'm going to try my very best to be good to Theo's wife to Peter," the girl promised, when, after spending an evening in the Throckmorton home, she made her mother-in-law good-night. "I cannot be near as good a woman as you are—but I will try to be like you—just as much like you as a silly girl can be like a wise woman."

"You will be a much finer woman than I have ever been, dear child," the matron said. "You of the second generation have learned in your youth lessons that we older folk have only just begun to learn."

Sophia Throckmorton kept back the sore tears that burned her eyelids. When her children were happy, it would be wrong to cast a shadow on their joy.

But when Peter had taken Theo home, and when Mortimer and Mary were in the living-room, the mother went to her own little room and closed the door.

She wanted to think things out. There was no reason why her son and daughter should not marry soon.

And then—what about her?

With an agony of yearning she thought of the old home in Nelsonville.

It was the house in which her husband had been born, to which he had brought her as a bride, and where their children had first seen the light. If Peter and Mary could only be near her—she would want to go back there to live.

The next day she wrote a long letter to Henry Pelham. She did not mention its contents to anyone.

Wrote Long Letter

She had had much to think about lately. And now she thought she saw in what direction Providence was leading her and those dearer to her than her own life.

She did not speak of her decision until a few days later when her son and daughter informed her that, if all went well, they could be married soon. They would have a quiet double wedding.

"When you children are married," Sophia ventured wistfully, "I would like to go back to Nelsonville to live."

"And leave us!" Mary exclaimed. "But it is home," the mother argued. "And I am tired of New York. I don't suppose I can make you two young things understand how I feel."

"But, anyway, I want to go back to where people know all about me—and like me in spite of it!"

Good Wages for Good Work

(From the April Issue of Hearst's Magazine.)

In industry good wages and good work are equally important. Good work makes a good product. Good wages make a good market.

A high standard of wages means a high purchasing power, and it should be one of the business objects of employers to maintain a general high standard of wages in order to maintain a general market for their products.

On the other hand, it should be the intelligent purpose of the labor unions to meet any depressed situation in business by increasing productivity, and removing hampering union rules which interfere with productivity and profits.

The first requisite for the payment of good wages is that the employers make enough money to be able to pay good wages.

Wealth cannot be distributed until it is created, and whatever interferes with the creation of wealth interferes with the distribution of wealth in wages as well as in profits.

When union rules interfere with the creation of wealth they interfere with the welfare of labor as much as they interfere with the welfare of capital.

As a matter of mathematical fact, they interfere with the welfare of labor a great deal more than they interfere with the welfare of capital, because about 90 per cent. of the wealth created is distributed in wages, and capital is well content with anything like 10 per cent. of the wealth created.

Wealth is production. There may be prospective wealth, putative wealth, potential wealth, in the soil, in the ore veins, in various latent forms—but actual wealth is only that which has been produced into the things that men require.

The more there is of production, therefore, the more there is of wealth.

And everything from human skill to labor-saving machinery which increases production increases wealth, and increases the welfare of the entire human race.

The greater comforts, luxuries, conveniences and advantages that modern man possesses over the men of former ages are due directly to increased productivity, which puts many of these comforts and advantages within the reach of all.

Still greater skill, still greater mechanical ingenuity and productive machinery will provide still greater comforts, conveniences and advantages, and place them at the disposal of absolutely all.

Whenever labor by restrictive rules, or capital by curtailing production, interferes with the creation of wealth, it interferes with the material development of the race and with the common possession of the advantages of modern productivity as far as each restrictive act is operative.

There are two fundamental facts to be recognized: First, that productivity is necessary for permanently high wages; and, second, that high wages are essential to general prosperity.

The less the productivity, the less there is to be distributed in profits and wages.

That is reasonably obvious.

And since the vast majority of the people of this or any other country are wage-earners, and general prosperity depends upon the prosperity of the mass, it is equally obvious that only liberal wages will create general prosperity and the general purchasing power, which, in turn, means the prosperity of every individual and of every individual business.

Let us, therefore, pay good wages for good work and give good work for good wages.

For only by such co-operative effort can we create the fullest productivity, the greatest purchasing power and the greatest prosperity.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

Direct Primaries Will Stay

It is useless for the politicians and the interests behind them to attempt to turn back the march of political progress in Massachusetts. We move rather slowly in this State, but we always consolidate our gains and hold them fast.

We experimented for years with the political convention, and we found it an unsatisfactory method of nominating our public officials, so we abolished the convention and decided to nominate our officials directly by ourselves. This new method has not worked perfectly. No human institutions work perfectly. Demagogues have taken advantage of the lack of personal acquaintance with them of the people and have become candidates without merit; some hoping that the election would go by chance, some hoping to take advantage of general public prejudice, for example, in favor of certain kinds of names; some hoping to take advantage of their place on the ballot, and some expecting to profit from the notoriety of their candidacy, even though they have no hope of nomination.

All these practices are bad practices, but everything is relative. They are not so bad as the convention method, which gave the professional politician and his masters, the big interests, absolute control of the nominations of both political parties.

Moreover, the evils attending the early use of the direct nomination system can be eradicated by a little energy and courage on the part of those who object to the system, if their objection is in the public interest and does not lie in the fact that direct nominations take away the power of the professional politician and of the big business interests which support him and use him.

The Boston American takes some pride in the belief that it has contributed considerably toward the abatement of the disposition of some of the cheeky element of the Democratic party to run for office for the sake of notoriety and in the hope that their names would give them the nomination. We have not hesitated to criticise a candidate whenever we considered it clear that his candidacy was based upon any of these unmeritorious expectations.

The people of Massachusetts are not in a particularly reactionary mood. We suggest to the gentlemen behind the scheme to abolish our direct primaries that they confer with the lobby behind the scheme to capitalise premiums. We think that this lobby will tell the lobby representing the old convention plan that the people of Massachusetts are not in the gullible temper they were supposed to be in.

Any such scheme would also have to run the gauntlet of the Initiative and Referendum.

The Remedy That Never Fails

More Truth Than Poetry

It's a Fearful Life

By S. E. KISER

I USED to be afraid at night
When, all alone, without a light,
I had to start upstairs to bed.
I feared that ghostly shapes were there
To float about me, in the air,
And listen to the prayers I said—
But that was many moons ago;
I've put away such foolish fears;
We gather courage as we grow
In worldly wisdom and in years.

When she was seventeen, and we
Had cooed and kissed, I feared that she Might float away, evaporate,
And leave me lingering lonely here,
To watch her grave year after year,
Lost in a world all desolate;
But that fear left me in due time;
I learned, just how I don't recall,
That still the world could be sublime
Without her silly help at all.

In recent years I've been inclined
To let a dark fear haunt my mind,
But after I have lost my hair
Perhaps, in some mysterious way,
I'll still find reason to be gay,
And notice beauty here and there.
With riper wisdom we grow brave;
Old men cast off their dread of death;
Some day I may not fear that they've
A law to tax me for my breath.

LEST WE FORGET

We must not forget when we draw up the peace terms after the next war to include in the indemnity 17,000,000 peacock's tongues, 22,000,000 horned toad's eyebrows and 111,000,000 left hind feet of graveyard rabbits.

HER FLATTERING OPINION

"I never search my husband's pockets," she said, with something akin to pride.

"In your faith in him as strong as that?" her friend asked.

"I haven't the least bit of faith in him, but I give him credit for being intelligent enough not to bring home anything he doesn't want me to see."

The Old Timers' Club

Do You Remember Way Back When—

Drivers of horse cars through Haymarket square used to swing their horses to one side so one horse would tip the switch table and throw the switch?—METHUSELAH.

Mount Pleasant avenue was "Politicians' row," and midnight conferences the rule?—HAPPY DAYS.

At Grant's reception in the early seventies Jim Fisk headed his New York regiment in a big parade?—SEVENTY.

The site now occupied by the Continental Clothing House was a market district and a famous shooting gallery was next door?—BULL'SEYE.

We used to go down where Commonwealth Pier is now and catch hardshell crabs, make a fire and cook them; send one of the guys across the bridge and get a milk can full of beer for thirty cents?—WAITER.

Free rides on the Fourth of July on the Boston ferries?—WATER FRONT.

Why?

Pet Peeves of Patient People

What got your goat today? You'll feel better if you tell the Pet Peeve Editor of the Boston American about it.

WHY do they ridicule girls who expose their shapely limbs to the sharpest winds, when they should be regarded as heroines?—SADIE G.

WHY do business letters sound like love letters? They begin with dear and end with yours.—CHELSEA.

WHY do fellows insist on spending money on girls and then accuse them of making suckers out of the poor fish?—SAMMY'S BIG SISTER.

"WHY" also appears every Sunday in the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

BEATING IT WESTWARD, April 2.

"THE ORIGINAL Fred Harvey.

"WHO RAN the eating houses.

"ON THE Santa Fe."

I SAID to the porter.

"OF COURSE he's dead?"

AND THE porter answered.

"HE CERTAINLY is!

"HE MOST certainly is!"

AND THEN I asked.

"HAVE YOU any idea.

"WHAT YEAR it was.

"HE CAME out here?"

AND THE porter said.

"NO SAH, I haven't.

"ALL I know.

"IS HE'S been dead.

"FOR A long, long, time.

AND THEN a trainman.

CAME INTO the car.

AND THE porter stopped him.

"THIS GENTLEMAN here.

"HE WANTS to know.

"ABOUT THE first Fred Harvey.

AND THE trainman said.

"ALL I know.

"IS THAT he's dead."

AND I tried again.

AND SAID to him.

"HAVE YOU any idea.

"WHAT YEAR it was.

"HE STARTED out here?"

AND THE trainman said.

"NO, SIR, I haven't.

"HE WAS dead already.

"WHEN I came to work."

AND I asked a waiter.

IN THE dining car.

AND HE didn't know.

AND HE asked another waiter.

AND THEN came back.

AND SAID to me.

"IS IT the one that's dead.

"YOU'RE ASKIN' about."

AND I said it was.

AND THEN he asked.

THE OTHER waiters.

AND FINALLY.

HE CAME back to me.

AND SAID to me.

"THEY DON'T know nothin'.

"EXCEPTIN' HE'S dead."

AND I took a chance.

AND SAID to the waiter.

"WELL, ANYWAY.

"HIS SPIRIT lives.

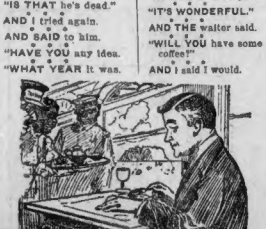
"IN THIS rhubarb pie.

"IT'S WONDERFUL."

AND THE waiter said.

"WILL YOU have some coffee?"

AND I said I would.



I THANK you.

JOINING THE "ORNERY" MEN'S CLUB

By Damon Runyon

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

My Dear Mr. Runyon:

I desire to propose for membership in the "Ornery Men's Club" the man who creates scenes with his wife in the presence of others, especially in public places.

Trusting this application will receive the immediate and favorable consideration of the membership committee, I am,

Yours very truly,
HENRIETTA H.

I TELEPHONED the chairman of the committee about the above application, and he promised prompt action.

I was able personally to guarantee the eligibility of the candidate to active membership in the "Ornery Man's Club" because I have seen him in action. He belongs.

Not long ago I was standing in front of a theatre when I noted a large, well-dressed, prosperous looking man pacing up and down the sidewalk, a pair of theatre tickets clutched in one hand.

Growing Angry

He was obviously waiting for some one, and was obviously fretful enough to chew nails. It was a few minutes past curtain time, and the crowd of theatregoers had thinned down to a few stragglers.

Presently a mild-looking little woman came hurrying along the street, and as she approached the large man, breathless, he flew into a towering rage.

"Didn't I tell you to be on time?" he roared, loudly enough to attract the attention of passersby.

I heard her say something about the children as she spoke. Then, suddenly, he tore the theatre tickets into shreds, tossed the shreds into the street and snarled:

"Well, just for that you'll miss this show."

I felt sorry for the little woman as she followed him down the street. Somehow it struck me that she did not get to see many shows, anyway.

Woman's Auxiliary

But, on the other hand, consider the lady who was sitting in a Broadway cafe the other night at a table next to that occupied by a number of men.

She was quarreling with her escort, a mild-drifty, bluish complexioned, black haired, slick looking Broadway type. He leaned over the table casually and slapped her face. Up jumped the men at the adoining table, but she stopped them with a glare.

"Some people around here had better be minding their own business," she said, lashing out with her arm and returning the slap.

There is, of course, a woman's auxiliary to the "Ornery Men's Club."

Stars and Stripes

The man who regularly blows his own horn indicates a mental fog.

They who exhibit learning as a window display have very little in stock.

The wisdom that comes of money is like the reflection of the mirror that depends upon its backing of silver.

Eloquence, like a cunning garment, often lends beauty to deformed thought.

The sweetness of revenge attracts a swarm of thoughts that carry stings of remorse.

A pure mind may look on evil, like the sun shedding its rays on filth, without polluting itself.

A fool gains weight from the wisdom of sages, but a wise man reads good advice even in the barking of a dog.

Wealth follows more readily in the path of contentment than contentment in the path of wealth.

Every time we read a profitless book, it is but an opportunity wasted to read a profitable one.

One act of kindness is better than a whole volume on philanthropy; and one word of love, better than a dissertation on happiness.

CYCLONE IS TAKEN AS PICTURE OF FATE

By The Spectator

A CYCLONE is a good picture of fate. One of these twisters struck the Gardner settlement, one mile from Oconee, Ga., on the 10th of February, and the account of its doings, the swift terror of its fatalities, its strange destructions and still stranger mercies, even its ludicrous pranks, furnishes a good illustration of life itself, with its mysterious mingling of inexplicable tragedy and queer comedy.

For, sometimes, have we not all felt it? Fate seems wantonly brutal, as when the young mother dies just as she is most needed by her husband and children. And sometimes absurdly careful, as when some old nuisance that never was of any account to anybody in his life is gently spared to be a hundred.

Queer Contrasts

One man will fall ten stories, land on a stone pavement and walk away grinning, with only a sprained wrist, while another will slip on a banana peel and be killed instantly.

I was once in a horse-car wreck out in the West. The car broke a wheel and rolled down a twenty-foot embankment. It was crowded, and several people were badly injured.

One man in particular interested me. He was an Englishman and had received a severe cut on his forehead which had drenched his clothing with blood. He insisted he was not much hurt, and when we had bandaged his wound with a handkerchief he walked with us a mile or so to town.

Very Angry

But he was very angry and swore prodigiously. For, he said, what made him so infernal mad was that he, who had traveled all over the world, had hunted tigers in India and hippopotami in Africa, had ridden on steamers, sailboats, stage coaches, horses, donkeys and camels, from Tibet to Tallahassee—that he, of all men—should get his first bloody accident on a bloomin' horse-car in Illinois.

The Englishman was not alone in his amaze at fate's freakishness. We have all been struck by it.

THE OTHER FELLOW.

Why don't you get out and try to save that fellow lodge member whom you know to be travelling a path which is sure to end in disgrace—possibly in financial ruin?

You promised when you joined that lodge that you would tell a brother member when he began to go wrong, and still you have known for a long time that a certain member is not doing right and you make no attempt to stop him.

Of course, he should be old enough to run his own affairs, he is experienced enough and has sense enough, it would seem, but he is not doing right.

Perhaps if you would go to him and have a straight talk with him, you might bring him to realize which way he is heading and you might be the means of saving him from doing something which would sweep not only himself, but his whole family to ruin and disgrace.

Drifting into bad ways is so gradual with many persons it is all but too late before they sense when they are on the down track.

Don't put it off another day, but have a heart-to-heart talk with your friend-brother.

Isn't there some friend of yours who needs your help and advice?

THE EUROPEAN IDEA

The allies seem to think that Uncle Sam ought to be willing to pay about eleven billion dollars for the chance he had to make good after saying he could cause Germany to holler for mercy.

SCIENCE MAY OVERSTEP

It is possible now for a child to discover the identity of his father by means of blood tests. This may clear up certain misunderstandings, but it isn't likely to help much by way of lessening nervousness.

AS USUAL.

I've figured up my income tax,
Yet trouble fills my dreams at night;
In spite of all the hours I've spent Accounting for each single cent,
I know I haven't got it right.
